Federal Protection Sought For People Who Use Animals

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers and livestock producers and processors should consider themselves at risk of a personal attack by animal-rights extremist terrorists, according to U.S. Rep. George Gekas, R-Harrisburg.

While there was no specific local incident available by presstime to back up that notion for farmers, there is ample evidence that those who use animals for research have been the target of terroristic, personal attacks.

To stave off this threat, Rep. Gekas has proposed HR 3064; legislation that would extend to people the protections granted farm buildings and biomedical research facilities and other operations which legally use animals.

Max Lang, head of the biomedical research department at Hershey Medical Center in Hershey, said Monday during a press conference at the research facility that he has received hundreds of death threats because of his job overseeing a research facility that uses animals to test medical technologies before trying them on humans.

He said that while he has never suffered from a personal physical attack in relation to his job, his peers across the nation and in the British and European countries have been subject to car bombs, death threats, etc., in addition to destroyed research facilities, test animals, and years of research.

An acquaintance of his in California has had to move residence every couple of weeks because of the harassment from animal rights extremists who have repeatedly found his home and attacked personal property and threatened he and his family, Lang said.

Another biomedical researcher whom Lang said he knows, was in the back yard of his own home when his car, parked at the front of the house, exploded because of a car bomb.

According to Lang, many researchers have gone to using remote control car-starting devices because of the threats on their lives, and no longer have the pleasure of being secure in unlocking their car, getting in and starting up for a drive.

Lang said his colleague was in the backyard with his wife, when he remotely switched-on his car and heard a loud explosion — not only did the car explode, but the front of the house was destroyed also.

Luckily no one was hurt, he said.

Enough is enough, according to Lang and several others who spoke during a Monday news conference at the Hershey Medical Center.

In effect, they said they are tired of being afraid of extremists and terrorists. They want a stronger defense.

Enter Rep. Gekas, who is credited by those who support animal-use as being a friend of the animal

Cambria County Extension Showcases New Services At Ag Advisory Council Meeting

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — New and innovative ways for Penn State Extension to serve farm and urban communities were showcased at the extension office when the Penn State University Ag Advisory Council met here this week.

For example, a coalition of community agencies formed with extension has embarked on a program aimed at teen parenting and pregnancy prevention that has received support from the 21 high school districts in the county. The program, initiated by Kathryn Hostetler, Cambria Co. extension director, features seminars at the extension office and programs that are taken into the school classroom. This program is just one of the new ways extension has become more visible and useful in the urban setting.

A companion program uses a 4-H club approach for youth offenders in the justice system. An eight week program put together by Gary Washington, assistant extension agent, gives the judge a rehabilative option for youth in trouble with the law. Working with the probation officer, the youth at risk is given a project of choice to complete and all the usual 4-H record books and oral presentations are required. The parents are also required to become involved. In this program called "Step In The Right Direction," almost all of the youth assigned a project have completed the program.

"This program has been very effective in helping the youth involved," Hostetler said. "For most of them, this was their 'first brush' with the law and was minor in nature. Prior to this program, these kids would have been released to their parents with no outside intervention. Now each is enrolled in a group situation with caring staff assisting them in learning skills that will help resolve future conflict situations in their lives."

A number of parents of the youth reported that the program has assisted them to get their kids back on track. The extension service now has plans to start a 4-H club of youth who have completed the "Steps" program.

DAIRY-MAP

Back in production agriculture, Gary Sheppard, extension agent from Westmoreland County, reported on the new Dairy MAP (Management And Profitability) program. Dairy-MAP works with dairy managers to improve all areas of dairy farm management in a workshop setting.

"It's important to recognize that management skills are useful to all managers, not just those responsible for other people," Sheppard said. "Management begins with managing yourself and your business resources to achieve goals. Dairy-MAP concepts can be used by any dairy manager, regardless of the size or type of business. Participants learn that the five elements of management are planning, organizing, staffing, directing, and controlling the business' resources to accomplish established objectives and goals."

Lancaster 4-H Honors Leaders At Banquet

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Four-H would not exist without your love for the community, for children, and for 4-H, Zoann Parker, Lancaster County 4-H agent, told 4-H leaders at a dinner held in their honor on Tuesday night.

Leaders who volunteered many hours of their time to the 4-H were honored at the banquet, in addition to the 4-H Superior Achievement Award winner (formerly called the Outstanding 4-H'er).

Eric Wenger, 17, son of Nelson and Alma Wenger, Manheim, won the 4-H Superior Achievement Award. Eric is a nine-year member of Mastersonville 4-H.

When she began as leader, Mary Lowry became active in the Peque-

Wool Act To Be Phased Out, Says ASI

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

KEMPTON (Berks Co.) — Wool producers may face some tough financial times ahead in light of the recent decision by the U.S. Senate and House to pass a bill that eliminates the Wool Act.

Late last week, the Senate passed the 1994 Agriculture Appropriations Bill, which funds the National Wool Act payments to qualified producers next April. In a separate bill, S.B. 1548, legislation to phase out the National Wool Act, was passed.

This could have immediate and drastic consequences for many of the 110,000 wool producers across the nation, according to Joseph R. Vogel, president of the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association.

According to the ASI Leader, a bulletin published by the American Sheep Industry Association, as written in S.B. 1548, with the signature of the President, the Wool Act will be eliminated with the end of the 1995 marketing year. In effect, payment rates will be reduced by 25 percent for the 1994 crop and 50 percent for the 1995 crop.

According to ASI, because of the work of lobbyists and industry leaders, the "compromise" bill was reached to ensure continued payments. The compromise gives "producers time to make critical short-term management decisions

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, October 20, 1993

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE: Trucklot buying interest was limited as most buyers wait for the markets to develop. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts from nearby production were adequate for the light demand, production from farther away was readily available, offered at lower prices, and not clearing. The undertone was quite unsettled. Line run breasts were at least adequate but most buyers limited receipts to standing commitments. Trading was at current prices. Thighs were quite irregular but in good shape overall. Whole legs and wings were well cleared at steady prices. Leg quarters were fully adequate and buyers were cautious.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer Market

Wednesday, October 20, 1993

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was light and unaggressive. Seller offerings were fully adequate to ample and slow to clear at several plants. Live supplies were moderate, instances heavy. Weights were desirable, instances heavy. Processing schedules were very heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 54 to 64 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to weak. In the parts complex, boneless skinless breasts were readily available. Wings were in a better balance with demand. Leg items, mainly leg quarters, were firmly held in some quarters, slow to clear in others.

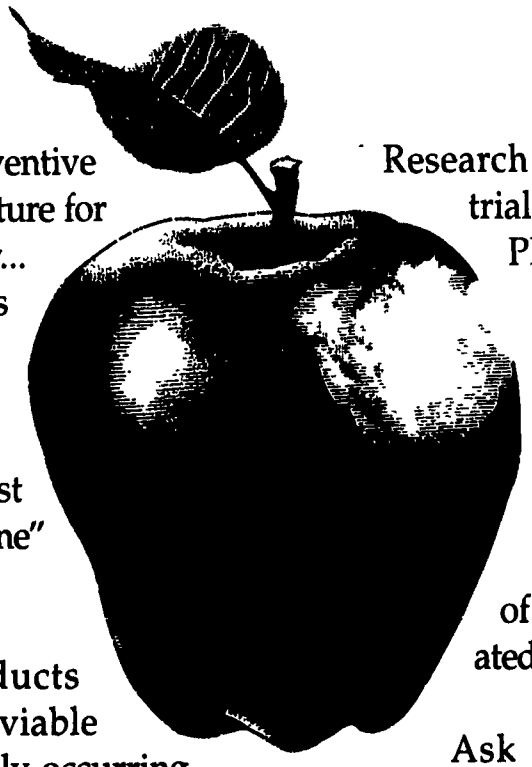
Think of it as "an apple a day" for cows and calves



Experts say "preventive medicine" IS the future for the dairy industry... and dairymen across the country say the line of PROBIOS® brand Microbial Products is the best "preventive medicine" of today.

Research and performance trials have shown that PROBIOS Microbial Products may:

- ◆ Stimulate appetite in freshening cows
- ◆ Reduce incidence of scours and associated treatment costs

PROBIOS Products contain selected, viable cultures of naturally-occurring lactic acid-producing bacteria... micro-organisms known for their beneficial activity in the digestive tract of animals. These bacteria are essential for proper digestive tract function and lead to better performance.

Ask about PROBIOS Products and start a prevention program for pennies a day.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

FULL HUNTER'S MOON, OCT. 30.

LADY LIBERTY

On October 28, 1886, Auguste Bartholdi's statue, Liberty Enlightening the World was unveiled on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor. Bartholdi was on hand to personally reveal his creation to the expectant crowds below. But other than Mrs. Bartholdi and the 8-year-old daughter of a French official, it was an all-male crowd gathered on the island. Excluding women from public events was not unusual then, and many women felt they should do some enlightening of their own. As a boat filled with suffragettes approached the island, a woman's voice rang out across the water. "We praise the embodiment of liberty as a woman. But is it not despicable that if Liberty had life, she could vote neither in the United States nor in France?" With that, a cannon was fired, the veil dropped, and Liberty was revealed.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Clothing zippers will wear better and last longer if you always close them before washing.

EARTHWISE

Although many toxic chemicals used to treat our food are absorbed into it, we can reduce our overall chemical intake by washing off the residue that remains on the surface. Use a teaspoon or two of vegetable-oil-based liquid soap in a large pan of cool water. (Water alone won't do the trick.) Soak food for 10 minutes then scrub with a natural bristle brush. Delicate foods like lettuce should just be swished around. Rinse thoroughly in several changes of water and place in a rack or colander to dry.

OLD-FASHIONED CIDER-BAKED HAM

Marinate a whole ham overnight in enough cider to cover. Next day, place ham in roasting pan and bake, uncovered, at 300° F for about 3 hours, basting frequently with cider marinade. Remove the rind and cover the ham with a mixture of equal parts brown sugar and bread crumbs, and a little powdered mustard. Stick whole cloves into the surface and brown in oven for about 1 hour longer or until ham is tender.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Cold and rainy, clear and warm west and south; turning clear and cold, light snow mountains and north.

SOUTHEAST: Possible hurricane coast with heavy rains, then clearing.

MIDWEST: Cold and cloudy, scattered showers, heavy rain southeast, then sunny and mild.

NORTHWEST: Clear and warm mountains, partial clearing coast, then rainy and cool.

SOUTHWEST: Clear and warm then rainy and cooler mountains and California.

OPINION

Beef Is Number One

Cattlemen don't just produce beef. They produce American jobs. That's the message Scott Barao, extension livestock specialist at the University of Maryland, wants the fine folks that produce cattle to know. Barao says he loves the cattle industry, and in his latest editor's corner in the university ag newsletter he lists a number of facts worth knowing.

The cattle industry is the largest segment of the American agricultural economy with sales of cattle and calves accounting for about $40 billion, a fourth of all cash receipts from farm marketings in the U.S. Cattle represent 46 percent of sales of all livestock and livestock products.

The family businesses run by cattlemen generate almost $250 billion annually in U.S. business activity, or between four and five percent of the $5.673 trillion U.S. gross domestic product. Cattlemen provide one million jobs directly in the beef business and nearly two million more business-related jobs all across America.

U.S. exports of cattle products account for about $4 billion in export sales each year, or about 11 percent of total U.S. ag exports. The U.S. produces 22 percent of the world's beef supply but has only 10 percent of the world's cattle inventory. Beef exports mean American jobs. For every $1 billion of American-produced products which are exported, 20,000 domestic jobs are created.

The retail value of the sale of fresh beef in 1991 was nearly $50 billion. Approximately $23 billion is spent for fresh beef in grocery stores. Beef is the largest dollar volume item sold in grocery stores, accounting for more than six percent of all grocery store sales.

Cattle and beef operate in a free market. Prices are set by supply and demand, and there is no government price support program for beef.

"Where's the beef?" became a famous question after it was popularized by a TV commercial. But when it comes to consumer preference and a big booster of the American economy, there is no question. Beef is number one.

Farm Forum

Dear Editor:

We do agree that the Self-Help program would be a way for the dairy farmers to keep going and to keep the surplus milk sold at competitive prices.

If you go to two-tier pricing you will put a lot of farmers out of business.

Ammon Miller
Vice President
Dover Local Order 6
Eastern Milk Producers Co-op

Dear Editor:

As a voting member at the Eastern Milk Producers delegate meeting, I would like to tell you why it was an unanimous vote for the Self-Help plan.

Self-Help is a plan to set up a farmer-run marketing system to sell surplus dairy products abroad. The alternative to this is two-tier pricing.

Self-help will give all farmers the opportunity to market their products without supply controls. The foreign market area is now expanding and now is the time for farmers to become involved in this trade area.

With the trend in Washington toward cutting farm subsidies and assessing farmers for their own programs, it is now time for us to make our own markets. Self-help is that solution.

To Vaccinate For Rabies

Rabies is becoming an increasing problem.

Recently, a policeman was treated for rabies and a farm placed under quarantine because of animals being exposed to rabies.

Whether you own a pet or raise animals commercially, proper vaccinations for rabies will help ensure your dog, cat, horse, cow, sheep, hog, or goat lead a healthier and more productive life.

According to Rich Barczewski, University of Delaware extension livestock specialist, not vaccinating is like playing Russian roulette. You never know when a problem will arise.

Vaccines are relatively inexpensive compared to treatment regimes for rabies. And once the disease is contracted, the treatment may not be effective.

Rabies is caused by a virus that when left unchecked results in death of the infected animal, including humans. The disease is extremely infectious and is spread when one animal bites another.

Do not take chances. Talk with your veterinarian and family doctor and develop a rabies vaccination program for your animals.

To Remember Evergreens Lose Their Needles

Bruce Hellerick, extension horticultural agent, reminds us evergreens are constantly losing and replenishing their needles. He said we see them as perpetually green because healthy evergreens do not lose all of their foliage at the same time.

Needle life ranges from one to six years depending upon the type of tree. Spruce, hemlock, and yew retain green needles for three to five years. Pines, which have one to three needles in a cluster, also have a long needle life. White pine and arborvitae drop one-year-old needles. This is usually not apparent because old yellow or brown foliage is concealed by new needles.

The growing season, past or present, may affect this. During a rainy summer, most plants add a heavy growth of foliage. If this is followed by a dry summer, the light new growth will not camouflage the old drying needles.

To Check Wood Burning Stoves

If you plan to burn wood in a stove this winter, take time to check the equipment to make sure it is safe and will function properly.

Wood stoves are never completely safe in all situations, according to West Virginia extension specialists. Users of wood stoves may significantly improve the safety and efficiency of a stove through timely maintenance and an understanding of some safety rules.

Some items to consider include:

- Carefully follow the manufacturer's instructions when installing a stove.
- Make sure there is adequate clearance between the stove and any nearby combustible surfaces or materials. The clearance should be at least 36 inches for radiant type heaters and at least 18 inches for circulating heaters.
- Protect the floor under the stove with a nonflammable material.
- Store firewood away from the stove. Do not try to dry wet, frozen, or green wood on or near the stove.
- Stove pipes of at least six gauge metal or heavier are recommended. Keep stove pipe runs short.
- Equip the home with at least one working smoke detector and a Class ABC dry chemical fire extinguisher.
- The chimney should extend three or more feet above the highest point where it passes through the roof and should be at least two feet higher than any part of the buildings within 10 feet of the chimney.
- Check the chimney on a regular basis for soot or creosote deposits. Use a flashlight to look down the flue and clean as needed.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?
October 24, 1993

Background Scripture:
Genesis 21: 1-21
Devotional Reading:
Genesis 21: 1-21

You've seen those puzzles that consist of a cartoon picture and the caption, "What's wrong with this picture?" At first glance, nothing may seem to be wrong. But as you study it more closely, you may see that the stool has only three legs, that the car has no door, that the cat has a dog's body, and so on.

When we read the stories of the Old Testament patriarchs and matriarchs, we need to do pretty much the same thing, lest we assume that the picture we get from these stories is the exact same picture that God wants to see us duplicate in our own lives. In other words, although these great personalities — Adam, Eve, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, — were heroes of faith in their own times, not everything about their lives is intended by God to serve as a model for us. In fact, Christianity has but one infallible model: Jesus Christ.

So, when we read of Abraham and Sarah, we must be able to see both what is right and what is wrong with the picture the Bible gives us. Abraham was a man of great faith in God. That is why he is of value for us today, teaching us to trust in God even when believing his promises is difficult.

THE NORM OF THE DAY

But there are some elements in his life that we must not duplicate. One of these was his acceptance of slavery. We cannot find fault with him, for, in his own times, it was the norm. God had not yet been able to persuade his children that slavery is an evil against God and humanity. It would take more than 2,000 years for that idea to take hold in human consciousness. He did not know any better, but we do.

So, the attitude of Abraham toward Hagar is understandable, if not admirable. This "slave woman" had two strikes against her. First, she was a slave, which meant she was not regarded as a real person. She was what the Nazis considered untermenschen — sub-human, the category in which they placed Jews, Slavs and others. Secondly, Hagar was a woman and women were not generally regarded as equals with men. So, when jealous Sarah declares to him "Cast out this slave woman with her son...," Abraham's concern is not for the injustice to Hagar or the hardship it will mean for her, but for his son, Ishmael: "And the thing was very displeasing to Abraham on account of his son" (21:11).

GOOD OUT OF EVIL

The decision to expel Hagar and Ishmael is Sarah's. Although she had originally instructed Abraham to have a child by Hagar, she found herself despising both the slave woman and Ishmael, the son that she had planned to call her own. Hagar had had no say in the matter. But, when Sarah had her own son, Isaac, she was determined that Ishmael be denied the rights of the first-born and be driven out with his mother to the wilderness and probable death. Again, we can understand if not approve of her attitude and actions.

I cannot believe that God was the author of this base idea. God is more compassionate and more just then we are, not less. Hagar and Ishmael had done nothing to deserve this fate. Perhaps the answer is that God saw that he could bring some good out of Sarah's selfish decision. Isaac would inherit Abraham's legacy, just as God intended before Sarah took matters in her own hands and made Hagar a concubine. And God would take care of both Hagar and Ishmael. In the long run, his gracious will for them would prevail, too.

The evil that befalls us in our lives is usually of our own making or the making of others. But God can use even the worst of situations to achieve good in his world. When we look at the picture of our world today, there is a lot that is "wrong with it." What's right with the picture is that God can still make it come out his way in the long run.

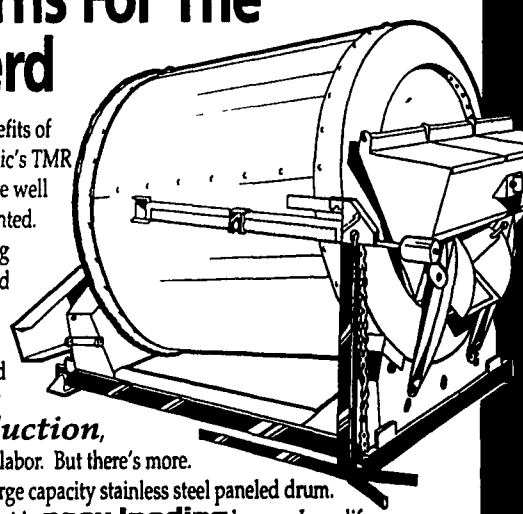
Make A Few Good Turns For The Herd



The benefits of Silo-Matic's TMR Mixer are well documented. Including improved herd health, increased milk production, and less labor. But there's more. Like a large capacity stainless steel paneled drum. Six foot wide easy loading hopper. Long life exterior auger bearings. And a control-flow system for adjusting the discharge rate. There's even a standard beam scale or optional digital scale for ration accuracy. So why wait? Give a few good turns for the herd with a Silo-Matic TMR Mixer.

Take the HQ Challenge:

Plant WL 322HQ. Harvest HQ. Test for RFV & CP.

If we're not A1, we'll replace the seed PDQ!

Guaranteed.

Alfalfa growers rarely have had any assurance about how well a planting will perform. Until now. We believe that our new high quality, high yield WL 322HQ is so good that we'll do something no one else will: guarantee it.

Simply purchase WL 322HQ, fill out the official HQ Challenge card and plant WL322HQ next to a competitive variety in your field. Harvest at the same time and have an approved lab test each alfalfa. If our bio-engineered WL 322HQ doesn't produce a higher Relative Feed Value and a higher Crude Protein, we'll replace the WL 322HQ seed with an alternate W-L variety of your choice. Guaranteed.

HQ The new symbol for high quality.

This is our way of letting you know that we believe our new HQ varieties are simply the best available in the field; university results have proven this to be true. So take the HQ Challenge. We're ready to prove our performance and back it up with more than promises. For HQ Challenge cards and complete details, contact your W-L Dealer – ASAP!

REPAIR & MAINTENANCE. Ours needs the least of all feeders Easy splicing with auger connector and no troublesome corners or chain guides to replace Saves money and time year after year

SIMPLE OPERATION. "Push-Pull" Power Units with low HP motor are located along the feeder line as needed.

EASY AUGER CONNECTOR. Allows fast and simple installation, also quick and easy repair of auger if ever necessary.

New Greenhouse Provides Learning Center As Ag Education Evolves

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Twenty-four years ago, according to Cliff Day, a Garden Spot High School ag science instructor, the school's agriculture department assembled a glass greenhouse on a wagon bed and took it to the elementary schools around town, demonstrating one aspect of agriculture education at work.

At a dedication ceremony on Tuesday afternoon, the work of promoting ag education evolved to a newly constructed greenhouse measuring 48 feet by 17½ feet, and involving all aspects of the school's Grassland FFA chapter and students from across the science curriculum.

About 150 gathered at the school's new facility, a three-bay, gutter-connected greenhouse constructed through a cooperative effort paid in part by the Rural Youth Development Fund program, area businesses, and lots of volunteer time by the FFA alumni, staff, and FFA members.

"For anyone who has any doubts about the direction that we're taking in education, moving away from sitting in the classroom to moving more toward performance-based education, being able to not only know something but be able to use it, walk in there and take a look, and you will see what young people are going to be more and more asked to do, not just in this program, but in other areas," said Don Carroll, Jr., state secretary of education.

According to school adminstration and staff, not only FFA members, but students throughout the school can utilize the facilities for various projects. The FFA chapter will administer some of the projects, and much of the material grown in the house will be sold at a special stand (to be constructed later), with proceeds to benefit the chapter.

According to Boyd Wolff, state secretary of agriculture, funding for the greenhouse was one of 95 different projects over the past 20 months, totalling about $325,000, from the Rural Youth Development Funds program. The program, according to Wolff, has also provided money for ag awareness projects, several farm safety projects, environmental science programs, seminars on careers in agriculture, programs to overcome rural barriers, and partial scholarships for students to attend youth institutes and leadership development seminars.

"We're no longer sending many of our students back to the farm," said Wolff. Wolff said the project will help FFA'ers "to pursue productive and important careers in agriculture."

"We have an aggressive, energetic, goal-oriented agriculture staff," said Bill Rohrer, superintendent of Eastern Lancaster County School District. "These individuals . . . are in touch with their environment."

Rohrer told those present that the ag department recognized the need for more space, literally, to conduct environmental science projects. He said the department recognized the changing face of agriculture, "from the traditional field crop and large animal production to vegetables and other products . . . a vehicle to aid the transition in ag technology."

Studies to be undertaken include the science of "aquaponics," which combine elements of fish agriculture and using waste water projects as feed for plants. Also, flowers will be grown and sold according to season, and the students will study aspects of horticulture related to vegetable production, bedding plants, and landscaping.

Dauphin Sets Field Day

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — A Nov. 4 Dauphin County field day is scheduled to emphasize techniques for managing crop residue so that farmers can maintain compliance with conservation plans, according to Paul Craig, Dauphin County extension agent.

Craig said that what farmers do now to their fields, as far as creating and maintaining crop residue levels, sets the base for the amount of residue remaining after spring planting.

Conservation plans, which are required in order to participate in federal programs, can be very specific for the percentage of residue left on a field in spring.

The field day, open to farmers in Dauphin and surrounding counties, is to be held Nov. 4 from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Milton Hershey School Farm Technology Center, located east of Hershey.

The field day is being coordinated by the agencies located in the Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resource Center, in Dauphin.

Specifically, the agencies combining efforts include the Dauphin County Conservation District, Penn State Cooperative Extension, and USDA's Soil Conservation Service (SCS), and the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service (ASCS).

According an announcement from the county's Conservation District, "using practical demonstrations, the 1993 Dauphin County Field Day will show how to farm for residue management. In addition, the program will focus on the need for conservation plan compliance, manure application, and perennial weed control on reduced tillage practices."

Those who attend the weed control session are eligible to receive a presticide credit, but need to bring their license along to the event in order to have the credit notated properly.

According to the announcement, "The primary emphasis will be on residue management using tillage equipment that most farmers currently have. However, farmers attending will have the opportunity to see some new tillage equipment demonstrated."

Scheduled speakers include Lynn Hoffman, agronomist from Penn State University, and Joel Myers, state agronomist for SCS.

Both are experienced in working with high residue farming and can be expected to provide those attending with help in best managing their own farm.

There will also be specialists, exhibitors and representatives from all the organizing agencies making presentations, doing demonstrations and answering questions.

According to the news release, to stay eligible for USDA program benefits, "farmers must now protection their land against soil erosion and preserve wetlands, as required by the Food Security Act of 1985. Since 1990, if you farm highly erodible cropland without a conservation plan, you will be ineligible for most USDA program benefits on all you cropland."

The announcement also reminds producers that the conservation plan must be fully implemented by Jan. 1, 1995, allowing one growing season to learn and plan for compliance.

Signs indicating the field day are to be placed along routes 422 and 322.

If farmers in northern Dauphin County call and express enough interest, the Conservation District will sponsor a bus to make stops in Gratz, Berrysburg, Elizabethville, and Halifax. Those interested in riding a free bus to the field day should call the district at (717) 921-8100 before Oct. 25.

Also, a free lunch is to be provided from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m.

The field day program is set to start at 9:30 a.m.. with registration, a welcome and introduction period at 10 a.m., and then right into a session on why farmers should be concerned with implementation of their conservation plan.

Scheduled speakers are Rick Kepner, a district conservationist with the SCS who is to discuss farm plans, spot checking and appeals; Ruth Hagy, executive director of the Dauphin County ASCS who is to discuss the impacts of non-compliance on eligibility for USDA programs; and Mike Hubler, a resource conservationist with the county Conservation District who is to discuss non-compliance and the Clean Streams Law.

At 10:30 a.m., Lynn Hoffman, is to speak, followed by Joel Myers at 11 a.m.

At 11:30 a.m. is to be a demonstration of tillage for residue management.

After lunch, Russel Cassel, assoicate director of the Conservation District is to discuss the role of manure in residue management.

At 1:30 p.m., Paul Craig is to discuss perennial weed control on reduced tillage acreage.

The last half hour is to be a review and question and answer session.

Umbrell, Brubaker Cap Year With 4-H Swine Honors

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

BIRD IN HAND (Lancaster Co.) — More than 125 4-H members, family, and friends were on hand to show their support of the county 4-H Swine Club at a special banquet at Bird In Hand Restaurant Thursday night.

Seven-year 4-H member Tina Umbrell, 18, daughter of Dennis and Linda Umbrell, Elizabethtown, was honored as 1993 Outstanding Member of the club. She serves as club vice president. Tina, who said that she has been very proud of her showmanship accomplishments at the Elizabethtown and Manheim fairs, in addition to the roundup and carcass shows in the county, attributes the honor to her hard work. This year, Tina placed first in senior showmanship at the county roundup, was awarded a blue ribbon for the top 10 project books two years in a row, and raised 19 market hogs in a profitable year.

The 1993 Lancaster County Miracle Child was honored as Rookie of the Year for his attitude and enthusiasm he put toward his club. P. Jacob Brubaker, 9, son of Doug and Brenda Brubaker, Kinzer, has participated during his first year at the roundup and carcass shows. According to his mother, Brenda, Jacob also helps out in all phases of the family's finishing operation, including sorting, moving, and feeding pigs.

Chet Hughes, extension livestock specialist, said this year the membership on the county swine club has increased to 91 members, 11 percent over last year. During the past six years, the club's enrollment has increased by 51 percent. This year, 27 are going to the state Farm Show — seven more than last year, he said. This is club's sixth year as a countywide organization, and they held their eighth show and sale at Manheim and their fifth successful carcass show.

Club officers are Tracy Bollinger, president; Tina Umbrell, vice president; Amy Bollinger, secretary; Regina Landis, assistant secretary; Matt Umbrell, treasurer; Travis Donough, assistant treasurer; and Scott Stoltzfus and Gerald Boyd, news reporters.

Carriage Club Celebrates 25th

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The Red Rose Horse and Pony Carriage Club celebrated its silver anniversary recently with a 14-mile drive through the picturesque farmland of Lebanon County. The drive included a stop at the farm on which the idea for the club was born more than a quarter century ago.

The caravan of 16 carriages, which ranged from two-wheel pony carts to four-in-hand road coaches, took their drivers and passengers back to their roots with a visit to the farm of the late Harry Harnish located east of the village of Prescott.

At the farm, Richard Glatfelter, of East Petersburg, one of three founding members who took part in the drive, outlined the birth of the club.

"Harry, I and some others showed and raced ponies," Glatfelter said. "One day after the racing season had ended we were here and Harry suggested we should do something more with our ponies. Over a big pot of bean soup we decided to form a club."

From those beginnings, the Red Rose Club has grown into an organization with 185 family members from the five-county area of Lancaster, Lebanon, Berks, Chester and Dauphin, plus New Jersey and Maryland.

Annual drives over the past quarter century have taken members west through the Gettysburg battlefield, east through Valley Forge National Park, south into Maryland and north into the Pocono Mountains.

But Sunday's drive was a nostalgic step back to commemorate the silver anniversary of the club.

The afternoon drive began with a catered luncheon hosted by club members Glenn and Robin Wenger in Myerstown.

Then, assembled in a block-long caravan, the group drove west and south through Lebanon County farm country. A halfway rest stop was made at the Richard Kreider beef farm.

At a brisk seven-mile-per-hour pace, the group clip-clopped through the colorful farmland that was beginning to show its fall finery.

Three founding members of the Red Rose Horse and Pony Carriage Club preparing for start of silver anniversary drive on Sunday include Richard Glatfelter, East Petersburg, on wagon; Joseph Kugler, Lebanon; and Charlene Hall.

Following the 14-mile jaunt, the group returned to the Wenger farm, Myerstown, for unhitching, reloading of vans, and the trips back home.

In addition to drives, the club also holds an annual sleigh ride in February at the Lebanon Pumping Station.

Tour To Showcase On-Farm Composting

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Montgomery County Cooperative Extension's Recycling Education Office has arranged with the Kumpf family for a tour of their new on-farm composting operation on Wednesday, October 27, 11 a.m., at the Kumpf farm, Trooper & Woodlyn Roads in Worcester.

Disposal of organic wastes is an increasing problem for many farmers, municipalities, and people in the green industry such as landscapers, nurseries, and greenhouses. Composting on an intermediate or large scale turns organic wastes into a valuable soil amendment and conditioner. Compost can enhance soils or replace costly peat and topsoil.

To get to the farm, take 363 (Valley Forge Rd.) to 1 mile north of Germantown Pike, then go east on Woodlyn and take the first left. The farm is on the corner on your left. The tour is open to farmers, landscapers, nursery and greenhouse owners, others in the green industry, municipalities, and anyone else interested in learning about medium-scale composting.

Andy and Rose Kumpf and George Leidig, of Autrusa Compost Consulting, will be on hand to explain what materials they are composting, where the compost materials come from, how the composting process is managed, and what is done with the finished compost.

The Kumpfs, Leidig, and Sally Pick, extension's recycling education director, will also be available to answer questions.

There is no charge for the tour. For directions to the farm, call the recycling education office at (215) 454-1245.

Lancaster 4-H Honors Leaders At Banquet

a Valley 4-H, helping many 4-H'ers, including her own daughters, through various cooking, sewing, gardening, and other projects. She was honored for her 25 years of serving 4-H.

Also, for 30 years of service, Mary Strubel was honored in county 4-H. Other honorees included Stella Hess, 20 years; Vicki LeFevre, 15 years; and Eleanor Good, 15 years.

Other leaders honored at the banquet include 10-year recipients Thomas D. Harris, Anna Mast, Ralph McLaughlin Jr., Linda Spickler, Dorothy Strickler, and Eileen Voran.

The dedication of leaders, some who have volunteered their services for 15 to 30 years, is what has helped the Lancaster County 4-H grow to 4,113 members in 160 different clubs, according to Parker.

The leaders, who volunteer their time to teach students from 8- to 19-year-old everything from computers to archery, range from teenager to retired.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

BERKELEY SPRINGS, Wyo. — Jon Reed was recently driving his truck down the interstates of Illinois and Iowa and spotted several herds of White Park cattle.

White Park? Few beef producers used the breed, let alone heard of it. But from what he saw and read about the cattle, Reed was convinced that he could use them on his own cow/calf farm, so he purchased two purebred cows and a bull and used them to crossbreed with some of his own herd (30 head, including calves) of Limousin cattle.

The White Park cattle, with the telltale white coat, black snout, and small, polled head have been known for years to have some of the highest fertility, ease of calving, mothering ability, milk production, feed conversion, and vigor of any of the beef breeds. Reed bought the cattle to cross with his own Limousin herd to provide a bigger weaning weight and faster gain.

Reed told Lancaster Farming that the cows show excellent maternal traits, including lots of milk production and gentleness with their calves. "They're real self-sufficient cattle," he said.

The breed itself doesn't carry a lot of weight, said Reed, and does excellent on a strictly hay diet. "They're supposed to do well on grass and hay," he said. Reed keeps his own livestock off grain as much as possible.

Along the interstates in many parts of the mid-West, Reed has noticed some White Park herds, purebred and scattered crossbred farms in Illinois and Iowa. From what he can tell, interest is catching on, mainly through the efforts of producers, and some from the White Park Cattle Association of America, based in Madrid, Iowa.

One breeder, Marilyn Moeckly in Polk City, Iowa, operates her own purebred and crossbred herds of White Park cattle. She manages about 100 head of Angus/White Park in a commercial herd and about 140 head of purebred cattle. She sells the cattle at 600-800 pounds as feeder stock.

Moeckly also serves as president of the White Park Association, which now has more than 400 members.

In an article in the July 1992 Rocky Mountain Feed and Livestock Journal, White Park producers Don and Wanda Allen of WD Farm in Walton, Ky., spoke about purchasing White Park cattle for the first time.

"I was comparing them to some of the cows I had previously worked," wrote Don. "I was afraid they would lift their tails and take off to parts unknown. Soon I was to learn, however, about only one of the many good characteristics of the White Park breed."

They are docile and easy to handle, indicated the Allens. They also have the penchant for enjoying grass in their diet.

The Allens wrote, "Some of the many reasons for owning White Park Cattle are high fertility, ease in calving, superior mother ability, excellent milk producer, feed conversion, outstanding vigor and hardiness. . . ."

The White Park's conversion rate, according to the article, is about 4.8 to 5.2 pounds per gain.

In the feedlots, according to Rocky Mountain Feed and Livestock, "White Park cattle show very good feed conversion and daily rate of gain, whether the feedlot is muddy, in continuous subzero weather or in the 100-degrees plus heat, they adapt and perform. Efficient feed use and gain rate put the Park feeder in the most desired slaughter category quickly — Low Choice to Choice; yield grade of 2 to 3; (and) 1,000 to 1,100 pounds at 14 to 16 months."

A few comparisons of carcass merits of White Park X Hereford steers from a Hays, Kan., test, according to the newspaper, show the White Park's progress:

- Average daily gain 93 days feedlot — White Park X Hereford, 4.15 pounds.
- Average total gain — White Park X Hereford, 615.8 pounds.
- Dressing percent — White Park X Hereford, 64.60.
- Percent Choice — White Park X Hereford, 67.6.

The cattle, according to Moeckly, are medium frame and have never been bred for draft animals and adapt very well to climate and available feed conditions, "with light red meat preferred by the lovers of fine textured beef," she wrote.

Tests are under way to collect data on performance and breed characteristics to form a database of expected progeny differences (EPDs) on the breed, according to Reed. Moeckly wrote that, in 1991, the association purchased a computerized performance program to "give a comprehensive reading across White Park herds in America for EPDs and ulimately sire evaluation," she wrote.

In the meantime, producers such as Reed are "real pleased," he said, with the cattle so far. Moeckly urges that producers who want more information on the breed to contact the White Park Cattle Association of American, 419 North Water St., Madrid, IA 50156, (515) 795-2013.

The White Park cattle, with the telltale white coat, black snout, and small, polled head have been known for years to have some of the highest fertility, ease of calving, mothering ability, milk production, feed conversion, and vigor of any of the beef breeds.

The Allens wrote, "Some of the many reasons for owning White Park Cattle are high fertility, ease in calving, superior mother ability, excellent milk producer, feed conversion, outstanding vigor and hardiness. . . ."

Maryland Women Take Top Title In National Dairy Judging

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Ogden Nash, the former tongue-in-cheek American poet of "Golden Oldie" days, once summed up his entire knowledge about cows with the line, "One end is moo, the other milk."

Nash could have learned a lot more about the bovine species from two young Maryland women who both won national championships in dairy cattle judging competition on Sept. 28 during the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

April Hall, 16, of Church Hill (Queen Anne's County) was the top individual among 132 contestants from 34 states and one Canadian province in the National 4-H Dairy Cattle Judging Contest.

Jenell R. Rinehart, 20, of Taneytown (Carroll County) placed first among 114 contestants from 30 colleges and universities in the National Intercollegiate Dairy Cattle Judging Contest.

Miss Rinehart is an animal sciences junior at the University of Maryland at College Park. She is a former state dairy princess and state 4-H Fashion Revue winner. And she was a member of the Maryland 4-H dairy cattle judging team that captured a national championship in 1989.

Rinehart won the national collegiate crown by a comfortable six-point margin in total score over her nearest opponent, Kim Brown from the University of Wisconsin-Platteville. She also placed first in both oral reasons and Jersey breed judging.

The Wisconsin delegation, however, won the team championship by a wide margin, with three of its team members finishing in the top 10. The University of Maryland team finished seventh, behind Cornell University and just ahead of the University of Wisconsin-River Falls.

Her national championship earned Rinehart a gold watch, a $200 cash award and the chance to compete for the $2,000 Kildee graduate study scholarship, granted each year to one of the top 25 contestants in the intercollegiate dairy cattle judging event.

Joining Rinehart on the University of Maryland team were Jennifer Woodward-Greene of Denton (Caroline County), an animal sciences junior, and two Frederick County residents — James M. Allen of Jefferson, an animal sciences senior, and Laurie Zimmerman of Frederick, a junior in agricultural and resource economics.

Maryland's 4-H team placed second in its division — losing to Florida, but edging out the big dairy states of New York, Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Minnesota.

Just a month earlier, April Hall, Maryland's national 4-H dairy cattle judging winner, had proved her all-around knowledge of dairy cattle by placing first among senior contestants in the 4-H and FFA junior dairyman contest at the Maryland State Fair.

She placed tenth in overall individual standings among senior contestants in the Maryland 4-H dairy cattle judging contest; so she had to work hard during tryouts to qualify for the state team that represented Maryland in regional and national competition.

Her national championship earned April the Lawrence O. Colebank $500 scholarship award from the American Guernsey Association.

Other members of the Maryland 4-H team competing in the national contest at Madison included Brian R. Schnebly, 16, of Dry Run (Washington County). Brian was the top individual among senior contestants in the 4-H dairy cattle judging contest on Sept. 4 at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

He placed second in the overall standings among 58 contestants from 15 states in the 4-H division of the Pennsylvania All-American dairy cattle judging contest on Sept. 20 at Harrisburg, Pa. In addition, he was third in oral reasons and first in both Ayrshire and Jersey breed judging.

Two 18-year-old Frederick County residents also competed. They were Annette Summers of Frederick and Shannon Harrison of Burkittsville. Annette was a member of Frederick County's team that placed first in senior competition at the Maryland State Fair. Shannon was a member of Howard County's second-place team.

Coaching both the Maryland collegiate and 4-H teams was J. Lee Majeskie, animal sciences specialist for the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maryland at College Park.

Dr. Majeskie has coached the Maryland 4-H teams for 12 years. This was the first appearance for a Maryland collegiate team in national dairy cattle judging competition since 1987.

Majeskie was assisted by Katharine Knowlton, a graduate research assistant. Helping with the 4-H team at Madison was Judy Iager of Fulton (Howard County). Mrs. Iager's son, Mark, and her husband, Charles E. Iager, Jr., are both past national champions in 4-H dairy cattle judging competition.

USDA Extends Crop Insurance Deadline

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation has extended the sales closing date for wheat, oats, barley, and rye to Oct. 31, 1993. Crop insurance cannot be purchased after certain dates and the sales closing date for most fall planted crops is normally Sept. 30.

This year, FCIC has extended that date to be certain farmers who need crop insurance have an opportunity to get it. That means most farmers will have an extra month to get the protection they need.

The floods and drought from last summer have left many farmers behind schedule and in need of this extra time to plan their risk management. Also, many farmers planning to apply for disaster assistance benefits will be required to show proof that they have crop insurance. That's true for every farmer except for hardship cases or very small losses.

There could be times when the application deadline for disaster assistance is after the crop insurance sales closing date, Robert Fenton, FCIC assistant manager for Insurance Services said, "This is one more way crop insurance is changing to meet the needs of America's farmers. This decision will allow many farmers to meet disaster assistance requirements who otherwise may not be able to comply. Since crop insurance must be purchased the sales closing date, this extension allows all farmers plenty of time to make an informed decision."

Crop insurance is sold by private insurance agents. An Agent Locator Directory is in every county ASCS office for farmers who need help finding an agent. Remember, crop insurance is risk management for the '90s.

Eligibility for participation in all programs administered by ASCS is on a nondiscriminatory basis as established under law without regard to race, color, religion, national origin, age, sex, marital status or disability.

ADA Directors Elected To National Posts

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Raymond Johnson, president of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) and member of its executive committee, was elected 2nd vice-chairman of the United Dairy Industry Association (UDIA), during the UDIA federation annual meeting in St. Louis, Missouri in September. K. Allen Roszel, vice-president of ADADC and member of its executive committee, was re-elected to serve on the UDIA executive committee as an at-large director, and was also re-elected as secretary of National Dairy Council, the nutrition education division of UDIA. Linden Smith, member of ADADC's board, was also elected to the UDIA board for 1993-94.

Johnson of Schagticoke, New York, has been president of ADADC for over eleven years and serves as director of Dictrict 4. In partnership with his son, Edward, Johnson operates a 400-acre Holstein farm in Washington County.

Roszel lives in Montrose, and operates a 500-acre farm with 100 head of cattle. He currently serves as director of District 17.

Smith lives in Augusta, New Jersey where he operates a 300-acre Holstein dairy farm. He represents District 7 on the ADADC board.

Wool Act To Be Phased Out

to meet immediate financial commitments, but at the same time it is expected to dramatically affect the financial picture for sheep producers nationwide who will deal with the loss of an average of 20 percent of sheep-related income with the eventual elimination of the program," according to the ASI Leader.

What this means is that producers should "make critical short-term management decisions to meet immediate financial commitments," said Gene Brune, ASI president.

In a release last week, Pierce Miller, ASI vice president, expressed frustration that the compromise reflects a move by Congress away from supporting agriculture industries in America. "The sheep industry is losing its only form of protection when dealing with the agriculture trade policies of foreign governments," he said. "American lamb and wool producers have no quotas on foreign lamb and wool nor protection from imports, except the small tariffs on wool which have funded the incentive programs now being phased out."

Miller said that other major sheep-producing countries heavily subsidize their sheep industries, including Australia, which has put "billions" in support of its industry. The European Economic Community pays subsidies of $24 per head in its countries, and China imposes high tariffs on imported products to protect its industry.

"It is a shame our country is willing to sacrifice support of a basic American industry when other countries worldwide recognize the economic and environmental benefits of sheep," said Miller.

The ASI Leader indicated that the industry plans to participate in hearings called for by Rep. Kika de la Garza (D-Texas) to determine the industry's future direction.

"I think producers must get their heads together to make short-term decisions," Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association President Joseph Vogel told Lancaster Farming.

The long-term effects could be drastic, and producers have to be worried about another problem lurking on the horizon: wool surplus. Right now, Australia has about 800,000 metric tons of wool in storage, which it is set to market worldwide in the course of five years, with a large portion of it coming to the U.S. That will drag prices — and demand — of domestic wool down, according to Vogel.

The Wool Act, established in 1954, allows up to 70 percent of the total tariffs on imported wool and wool products to go to the program to provide incentive payments to wool and mohair producers. Nearly 70,000 wool producers receive program payments.

More than 350,000 Americans are employed in related businesses, which could all be affected by the elimination of the Act.

The legislative committee of the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers association will meet toward the end of November this year to discuss the implications of the elimination of the Wool Act. For more information, contact Joseph Vogel at R.D. 1, Box 188, Kempton, PA 19529, (215) 756-4212.

ASCS Announces Crop Disaster Program

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Emergency disaster legislation signed recently by President Clinton authorizes USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to pay 100 percent of each eligible disaster claim filed by producers who sustained quantity and/or quality losses on their 1993 crops due to weather related disasters.

"Eligible producers may apply for disaster assistance through March 4, 1994," ASCS official Jennifer K. Minnich said. She said the 1993 crop loss benefits will be paid to eligible producers after the producer submits all required information to ASCS.

To be eligible for disaster benefits, producers with crop insurance must have had losses greater than 35 percent. Producers without crop insurance must have had losses greater than 40 percent.

"Farmers who lost over 65 percent of their 1993 crops must purchase multiple peril crop insurance on the same crop for 1994," Minnich said.

The ASCS disaster program provides cash payments for production losses on participating program crops of wheat and feed grains; nonparticipating program crops; soybeans; and all commercial non-program crops.

More information on 1993 crop loss benefits may be obtained from the Lebanon County ASCS Office, or any local ASCS office.

Eligibility for participation in all programs administered by ASCS is on a nondiscriminatory basis as established under law without regard to race, color, religion, national origin, age, sex, marital status or disability.

Cambria County Extension Showcases

FORESTRY

The second part of the program Wednesday morning focused on urban and community forestry. Extension foresters are located at the four corners of the state and help communities plan and use their forest resources to best advantage.

The conflict between large trees and overhead electric power wires has been an on-going problem for more than 100 years. The new approach is to find varieties of trees that are beautiful but do not conflict with existing power systems.

Charles Olenik, president of the Pennsylvania Urban and Community Forestry Council, said urban forests are one of our most precious resources, but many communities do not fully enjoy their benefits.

"Some community trees are declining due to old age and improper maintenance," Olenik said. "Wounds from building construction, roads, sidewalks and utility lines also help to deteriorate trees. Communities can enhance their trees, greenspaces, and urban wildlife by implementing a conprehensive and sustainable urban forestry management plan."

The extension urban forester's job is to help provide technical advice and plans of action for communities who want to increase their use of trees. In addition, extension provides workshops and other educational opportunities to communities and volunteer groups.

AG*SAT

Another exciting addition to the extension service program comes from what is called AG*SAT. Now with proper down-link capabilities, educational programs from 46 affiliated institutions in 40 states and two USDA agencies can be received for live input into educational programs or recorded on VCR for future use to supplement additional educational programs.

The first down-link in Pennsylvania was installed at the Cambria County extension office and has become an integral part of their educational programs. With the system, access to research and educational information is almost unlimited. Some programs have a users' fee, and others are free and can be picked up on home satelite systems.

Now additional down-links are planned for many extension offices across the state to be completed by the end of 1994.

In a report to the Council, Dean Lam Hood reported that enrollment in the PS College of Agricultural Sciences has increased by 515 students over the fall term of last year. Enrollment this fall is 2,535 students.

Hood also announced increases in scholarships, grants, and awards had brought the total in 1993 to $512,774. A total of 340 students have received support from these funds.

In reviewing the college future committee recommendations, Hood emphasized the statement that the college will "maintain its traditional committment to meeting the needs of the Pennsylvania food system, refocus family living programs on resource-stressed families and minority audiences, strengthen youth development programs, and enhance capacity to deliver quality educational programs that support rural development."

If the presentations on the program to the Ag Advisory Council at this meeting are indicative of what is happening in Penn State Extension offices across the state, the implementation of recommendations for the future has already begun now.

In the council's business meeting, Hugh MacWilliams, PA seedmen's Assn., and Dick Rossman, PA Assn. of Conservation Districts were elected to the second three-year term on the board of directors. Dave Ivan, PA Beef Council, and Bill Nichol, PA Holstein Assn., were elected to a first three-year term.

Earl Fink was elected president; Jay Rush, vice president; and Jack Dreibelbis secretary/treasurer. Pat Heuser, the new director of industry relations for the College of Agricultural Sciences, is the liaison between the college and the council.

Federal Protection Sought For People Who Use Animals

use industry and "key" in ensuring the passage of the Animal Enterprise Protection Act of 1992.

On Monday, Lang and the Hershey Medical Center administration opened up the research center for use by Rep. Gekas and several representatives of agricultural and biomedical research support organizations, so they could hold a press conference to announce the introduction of a proposed amendment to the Animal Enterprise Protection Act.

Gekas told the group that a study by the Justice Department had indicated a growing trend in violent acts against the people who use animals, instead of the institutions.

"Animal rights terrorism is a growing underground movement which must be stopped," Gekas said. "My legislation is offered based on the findings of a September 1993 report issued by the Justice and Agriculture departments which documents this growing trend of personal victimization."

Although a copy of the report was not available by presstime, Gekas said it states, "the most disturbing pattern to emerge during the period in question was that individuals and their personal property were targeted with increasing frequency."

The six-term representative of the 17th District said the report also states, "all of the extremist acts that have been directed against individual researchers have involved either threats against their person or family members or vandalism to their personal property or both."

In an effort to curb such activity, Gekas has proposed addressing the problem by including wording that basically repeats the protections now afforded farms, livestock yards, zoos, and research facilities against terrorists, but specifically states that people involved in the operation of animal-use facilities are likewise protected.

Gekas said he was "confident" that his measure would serve as a "preventative and deterrent" to the personal attacks.

His measure is also supported by Americans For Medical Progress Inc., an Arlington, Va.-based organization that supports the education of laypeople as to the truth about medical research and the use of animals.

It's president, Susan E. Paris, provided media with information packets that included a fact sheet that debunks animal rightist rhetoric.

In fact, according to Paris's data, "humans are used in medical research far more often than animals."

Among those who on Monday called attention to the agricultural benefit of the proposal and supported Gekas was Janet Carson, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Farmers Association/Farm Bureau.

She and Kenneth Brandt, founder and representative of Pennsylvanians for Responsible Use of Animals (PRUA), and Brenda Shambaugh, lobbyist for the Pennsylvania State Grange, took turns making statements about their respective organization's support for the proposal.

Gekas said he has strong support for the measure and was optimistic that it would be passed.

However, not everyone in agriculture is sure that Gekas's proposal is needed.

Or even desired.

Steve Kopperud, lobbyist and vice president of the American Feed Industry Association, said that the AFIA position is that, while the 1992 Animal Enterprise Protection Act was and is a necessary and important protection for those whose property has been put at risk by animal rights terrorism (including farmers), the amendment proposed by Gekas doesn't provide any additional protection to people.

He said that while the proposed amendment is specific in addressing protections for people, existing laws already provide those protections, therefore, it is perceived as over-legislation.

He said this is especially so, because, as of yet, there have been no court cases which would require the amendment and, in the AFIA's viewpoint, no logical reason to suspect that prosecutors would use the law if it were passed.

From the left, those who support federal legislative proposals to protect people who use animals are, from the left, Brenda Shambaugh, with Pennsylvania State Grange, Susan Paris, president of the Americans For Medical Progress, Inc., Kenneth Brandt, with Pennsylvanians for Responsible Animal Use, U.S. Rep. George Gekas, who proposed the legislation, and Jan Carson, with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

"We have the greatest respect for Gekas," Kopperud said during a Thursday telephone interview from his Washington, D.C. office.

"If not for him, we wouldn't have the fundamental law (Animal Enterprise Protection Act) at all. But we just think it's premature."

Kopperud explained that the key for getting the AEP Act passed was the lack of legal protection afforded animal enterprise operations.

However, he said this time it's different, because there are many laws on the books which cover terrorism, vandalism, assault, and other forms of personal attack.

In a newsletter he publishes, Kopperud said the AFIA, and the National Association for Biomedical Research, among others are looking more to see "how existing state law — such as anti-stalking laws, for instance — can be effectively used to provide enhanced personal protections for animal enterprise employees."

The newsletter further states that "the Department of Justice has been asked to create a model state bill to protect individuals against harassment and 'stalking,' and AFIA will continue to research ways in which this model can provide more protection for individuals."

Following the news briefing, Lang and personnel of the Hershey biomedical facility offered a tour of its facilities, where research is ongoing for finding cures for terminal and cripling diseases.

As department head, Lang has for years been open to press inquiries and tours of the biomedical research facilities, in an effort to allow the public to better understand the strict rules and regulations and the professional moral and ethical codes which are in place for those who conduct biomedical research with animals.

On Monday, it was evident that the hospital has upped security around the facility as only invited media who parked in an assigned and guarded parking lot were admitted to the conference.

Corn Test Plots Harvested

SMOKETOWN (Lancaster Co.)—The test plot corn harvest machine moved forward a short distance, stopped, weighed and moisture-tested the shelled corn, filed the information in the computer and moved on again. This sequence of short moves was repeated many times last Friday as the AgriPro test plots for P. L. Rohrer & Bro., Inc., were checked for yields. Gary Stewart from Brookston, Illinois, and Paul Campbell from Rohrers had a full day's work to shell and test 830 plots that were grown just east of Intercourse. The plots represented research on varieties that may become future seed offerings. In addition, 140 plots were demonstrations.

The local test plots are representative of the 100,000 test plots AgriPro had across the nation. Stewart sees a lot of different areas in the country where corn is grown as he travels on the job as a research corn breeder. And he sees the 1993 corn as "not quite as large a crop as expected."

It's so variable from state to state and even within counties," Stewart said. "A wet spring and the floods and droughts of the summer will affect the crop. It's too early to know exactly what the frost will do in some areas where the corn was planted late.

As for seed corn supplies, Stewart thinks there will be adequate supplies of most varieties. Any deficiencies will be made up in winter production in warm climates.

MORIDGE

the grain dryer that only needs a little understanding.

You don't have to be a grain drying expert to own, operate and make money with a Moridge Grain Dryer. Here are three important aspects of our dryer we think you should understand.

Low Purchase and Operation Costs

Ease of Operation

Our round base levels quickly on any terrain. Add fuel and power supply, load grain into attached hopper, set controls, ignite burner and begin your own grain drying operation.

Handles Grain with Care

Moridge Dryers have been designed to minimize kernel damage wherever possible. We feed directly from loading auger flighting to the flighting of the recirculating auger; we measure grain temperature rather than air temperature; steeply angled walls of bottom cone increase flow of grain to base of the recirculating auger; and we even added a 3-speed transmission* for varying speed during drying and load-unload cycles.

Dairymen Middle Atlantic Division Posts Positive Year

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — A "good year" is how Fred Butler described the 1993 corporate fiscal picture for members of the Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen, Inc., during the dairy cooperative division's annual meeting recently at the Hagerstown Sheraton Inn.

"We expect to show a profit of $3.2 million on operations, have put over $2 million more into cash flow, added over $1 million to member equity, reduced our overall debt significantly, and raised our financial credit rating," said Butler. The Inwood, W.Va., dairy farmer is president of the Middle Atlantic Division, with offices at Sykesville, Md., serving members from Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia.

Butler noted that the dairy industry continues to consolidate, losing an estimated 17 producers per day across the country. He predicted that by the turn of the century, only 95,000 dairy farmers will be producing the nation's milk supply.

As dairy farmer numbers shrink, it is increasingly important that dairymen be unified, Butler reminded the gathering of members and guests.

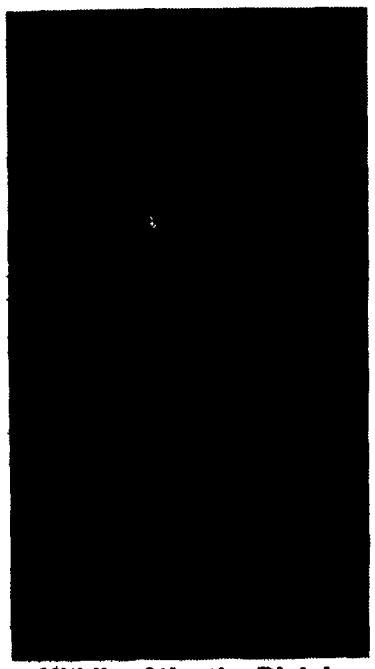
"Our goal is to get the government out of the so-called 'subsidy' to the dairy industry and let us farmers control our own future excess supply of milk," he said.

Butler reviewed the present "self-help" program proposed by the National Milk Producers Federation, noting that the compromise proposal is an effort to bring together advocates and opponents of two-tier supply management. He estimated that "for every cent of assessment from producers, we can put 50 cents back into the milk check." Producers who did not make any more milk than they did in the previous year would have their assessments refunded under the self-help proposals. The program would be farmer controlled.

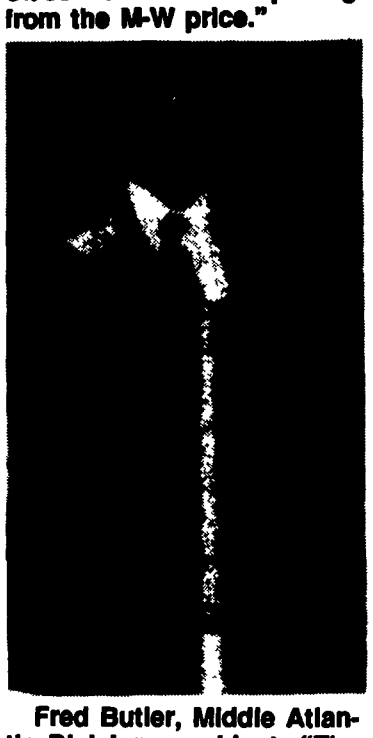
Butler also touched on the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), calling it "good for agriculture." While industry favors NAFTA, labor does not, Butler said. With the world ready to supply the needs of the Mexican market, he stressed that time has come to proceed with implementing the trade agreement.

Business activities of the division through the past fiscal year were outlined by manager Boyd M. Cook. Cook said memberships numbers have remained fairly constant, profits were shown in both the division's hauling and supply services, and employee retirements and realigning of responsibilities have resulted in overall cost savings.

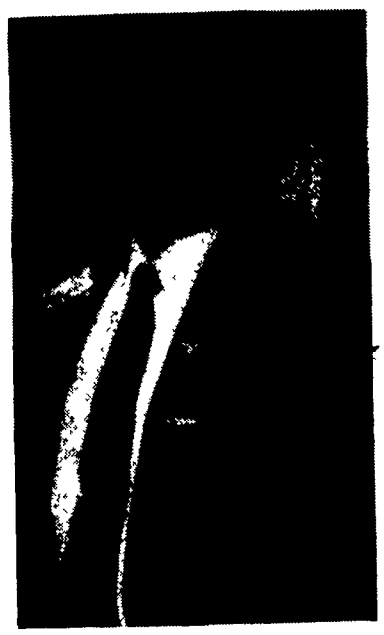
Because of federal budget mandated fuel tax increases and use of low-sulfur fuels, the cost of diesel for milk hauling is expected to rise as much as five cents. Cook warned that, after several years with no increases in hauling, division milk pickup costs would likely rise a cent or two.



Middle Atlantic Division manager Boyd Cook: "Industry leaders need to look at possible ways to decouple Class I and Class II pricing from the M-W price."



Fred Butler, Middle Atlantic Division president: "The dairy industry is losing 17 farmers every day."



During the open forum portion of the Dairymen division meeting, Franklin County dairy producer Robert Grove questioned the possibility of establishing a farmer-funded national fund that would help support milk powder movement to needy countries in cooperation with church and community organization relief efforts.

James Mueller, Dairymen CEO: "Our biggest challenge continues to be getting the industry to work together."

"Industry leaders need to look at possible ways to decouple Class I and Class II pricing from the M-W price," said Cook. He explained that fluid milk and soft dairy products — yogurt, ice cream, and cottage cheese — have a standard consumer market value and should not fluctuate widely as they do under the current Minnesota-Wisconsin-based pricing. The M-W has been extremely volatile through the past year, with counter-seasonal increases in cheese prices through spring months and a steep drop in June. Prices began another steep climb upwards in September.

Cook reminded producers that dairy support costs to the government have dropped dramatically, from $2 billion in the early 1980s to less than $300 million, while food stamps and other feeding programs now account for more than half of the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) budget.

While federal estimates of surpluses earlier in the year were predicted at more than 7 billion pounds — a level which would trigger additional dairy farmer assessments to meet Gramm-Rudman budget-cutting mandates - both division president Butler and manager Cook predicted the surplus would not surpass the added assessment-triggering 7 billion pound level.

Cook further updated members on the 26-member Maryland Dairy Task Force working toward the goal of establishing a Maryland Milk Commission. Ultimately, Cook said, a Maryland Milk Commission could cooperate with similar boards already in Pennsylvania and Virginia to provide stability to the dairy industry through the entire region.

"Fiscal 1993 was a turnaround year for Dairymen," according to James Mueller, the cooperative's chief executive officer. Mueller reviewed the corporate financial picture and outlined stratetic planning of the Louisville, Ky. — based dairy cooperative. Sales increased, about $8 million in debt was reduced, and an equity revolve is probable for December 1.

Mueller told members that negotiations continue between the cooperative's Flav-O-Rich processing subsidiary and potential buyer Dean Foods of Chicago, with the proposal currently under review by the Department of Justice. Any transaction between the two companies would need approval by the boards of both. The dairy cooperative's five cheese and butter-power manufacturing plants are not part of the negotiations.

Strategic focus continues on areas such as pooling procedure studies, curtailment of expenses and overhead, and continuing to be a service and quality supplier to customers.

Efforts continue, Mueller said, on establishment of a Dairy Cooperative Marketing Association (DCMA) in the Southeast which would operate similarly to the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Association (MACMMA) to aid in stabilization of raw milk pricing. Because of lack of cooperation by three processors with independent supplies, DCMA's success in holding prices has been limited.

"Our biggest challenge continues to be getting the industry to work together," said Mueller. "Partnerships must prevail between suppliers and processors. Cooperatives will be increasingly important in the future to provide such services as milk procurement, balancing surpluses, importing milk into deficit areas, and quality programs."

The Dairymen, Inc., CEO encouraged members to plan to attend the cooperative's corporate annual meeting, scheduled for December 9-10 at Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tenn.

Recognition was extended to the Middle Atlantic Division's 1993 Young Dairymen couple, Mike and Dorrie Blue, Shenandoah Junction, W.Va. The Blues and their two young sons are part of a family 150-milking head and 900-acre crop operation and are active in numerous community and church activities. Mike and Dorrie will represent the Middle Atlantic Division at the cooperative's Young Dairymen competition during the December annual meeting.

During the annual business meeting, four directors to the Middle Atlantic Division board were ratified for three-year terms. Re-elected to board terms were Jesse I. Burall, Monrovia, Md., District 4; J.A. Bupp, Seven Valleys, Pa., and Paul R. Waybright, Gettysburg, Pa., both of District 7. Edward N. Lipscomb, Eglon, W.Va., was newly elected to represent District 11. Recognition was extended to Bill Jackson, New Salem, Pa., former District 11 director who retired from the board.

Maryland State Dairy Princess Dawn Downey offered a milk toast to Dairymen members and guests attending the division annual meeting.

Penn State Dairy Scholars Receive Awards

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Several Penn State University Department of Dairy and Animal Science students recently received monetary awards in recognition of their efforts.

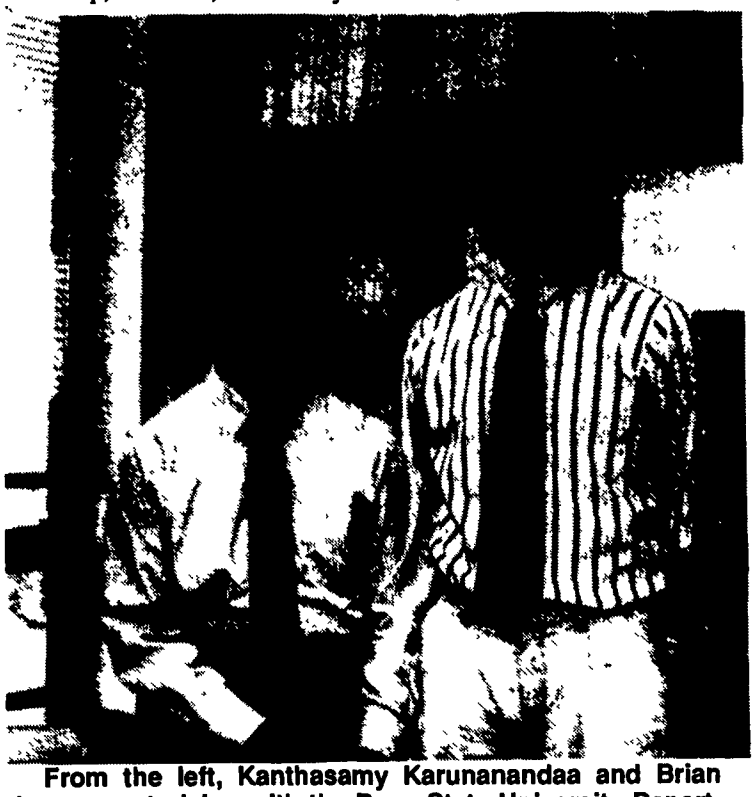
Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science has chosen three scholars to receive the John O. Almquist Graduate Student Research award, which is a $3,000 endowment to support research in pursuit of a graduate degree.

At the same time, two students received scholarships of $1,000 each from the American Feed Industry Association in recognition of their outstanding achievement, scholarship, citizenship, leadership, character, and activity.

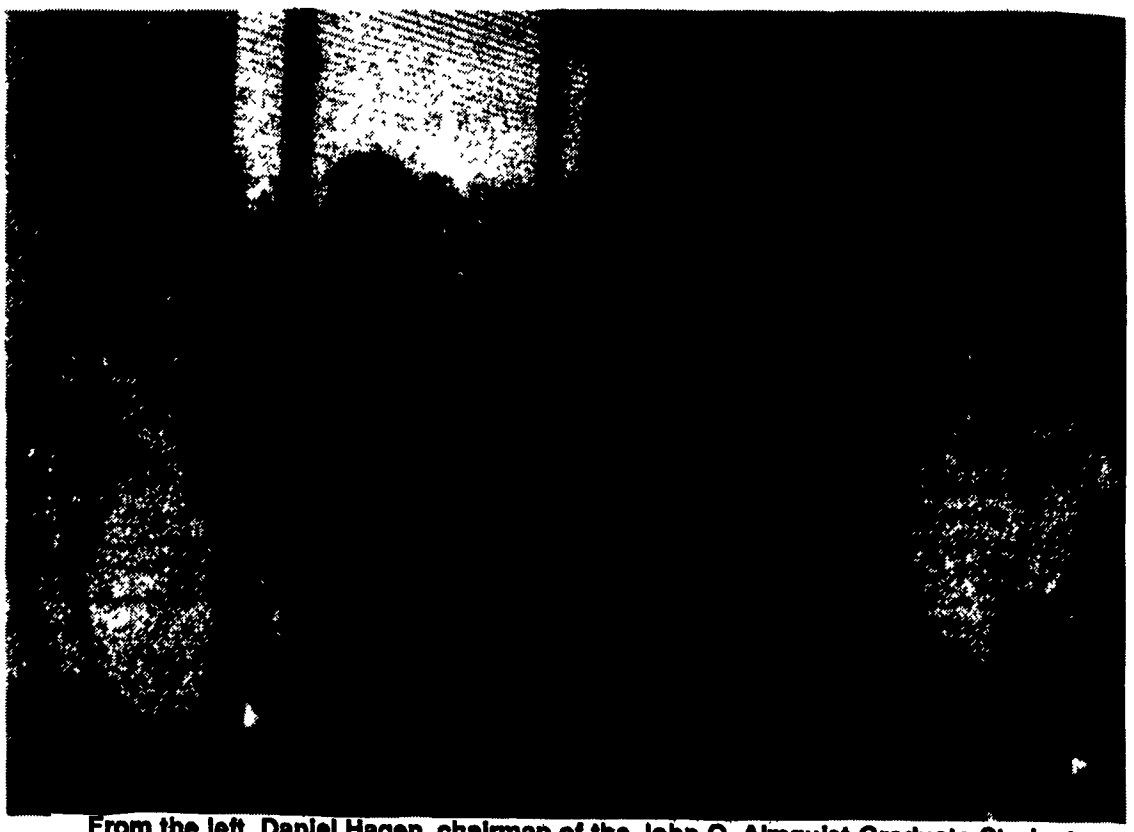
The Almquist award recipients were Valerie Fishell, Douglas Hongerholt, and George Vatzias, all three of whom are candidates for doctorate degrees. Harry Roth, of Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, which sponsors the award, presented them during a recent ceremony in State College.

Department head Stanley Curtis said, "We are grateful for Atlantic Breeders' generosity and vision in support of graduate study and research in animal science."

Fishell is researching the effect of dietary vitamin E on pork composition and quality; Hongerholt's is pursuing the effects of grain feeding frequency on rumen fermentation and lactational response of dairy cows rotationally grazed on pasture; while Vatzias is investigating the effect of genetic selection for high ovulation rate on insulin-like growth factor-I (IGF-1) and IGF-binding protein concentrations in ovation follicular fluid of gilts.



From the left, Kanthasamy Karunanandaa and Brian Lammer, studying with the Penn State University Department of Dairy and Animal Sciences are the recipients of scholarships from the American Feed Industry Association.



From the left, Daniel Hagen, chairman of the John O. Almquist Graduate Student Research Awards Committee, stands with recipients Doug Hongerholt and Valerie Fishell, Harry Roth representing sponsor Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, and John Almquist, for whom the award is named. Not shown is award recipient George Vatzias.

All three are to present their findings in the department's Colloguium series during the semester their thesis is completed.

John Almquist, for whom the awards were named, was present during the ceremony. He served on the Penn State faculty for almost 40 years and retired in 1983.

He had joined the research faculty in 1944, six years before his creation of the Dairy Breeding Research Center. In 1981 Almquist was the recipient of the Wolf Prize in Agriculture, comparable to winning the Nobel Prize, for his work in artificial insemination for livestock improvement, according to a department news release.

The recipients of the American Feed Industry Association scholarships were Brain Lammers and Kanthasamy Karunanandaa.

Lammers, who is pursuing a masters degree in animal science, entered the department's graduate program last fall, after completing undergraduate work in dairy science at Ohio State University.

Kanthasamy recently passed his comprehensive doctorate examination and is to spend the next year working on his thesis in ruminant nutrition. He completed his undergraduate degree in Srilanka before receiving a master's degree in agronomy from Penn State.

He was also first among 11 entrants in a graduate student paper presentation contest during this summer's Eastern Forage Improvement Conference, sponsored by the Northeastern Branch of the American Society of Agronomy. His presentation was on botanical fractions of rice straw colonized by white-rot fungi: the effect of fiber digestion and fermentation characteristics in vitro.

Dairylea Holds Meeting, Selects Executive Committee

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The board of directors of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., based in Syracuse, N.Y., recently re-elected its executive committee for another year during a recent reorganizational meeting held at the cooperative's annual meeting in Liverpool, N.Y.

The delegate body also ratified a redistricting plan which changes district boundaries to make them closer to equal in membership strength.

Dairylea is a Syracuse, N.Y.-based dairy cooperative with more than 2,300 member farms throughout the Northeast. It markets a total of 3.1 billion pounds of milk annually and participates and is invested in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland and Ohio.

More than 750 farmer members and industry guests attended the two-day annual convention, which included a management presentation by Dairylea Chief Executive Office Rick Smith, and an annual address by Clyde Rutherford, the cooperative's president.

Re-elected to the executive committee were Clyde Rutherford, of Otego, N.Y., president; Warren Beardsley, of Fairport, N.Y., at first vice president; Raymond Diebold, of Altoona, second vice president; James Madigan, of Towanda, as treasurer; and Raymond Johnson, of Schaghticoke, N.Y., as assistant treasurer.

In other electorial action, Douglas Young, of Union Springs, N.Y., Hugh Humphreys, of New Hartford, N.Y., and Edgar King, of Schuylerville, N.Y., were three new members seated on the board of directors. Beardsley and August Knispel, of Pittstown, N.J., were both re-elected to the board.

During his presentation to the delegates and guests, Smith said that the cooperative has continued to pay a competitive price to dairy farmer members with milk sales increasing by $38 million, or 12.5 percent over 1992 sales.

According to Smith, total milk marketed this year increased by 11.3 percent, going from 2.2 billion pounds in 1992 to 2.5 billion pounds this past year.

At the same time, member and affiliate member milk production increased 15 percent.

According to the cooperative, it experienced an increase in member farms, with 627 dairy farmers joining within the last 18 months.

The co-op's growth compares to a farm decrease of 5.6 percent in the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Order, and a 2.8 percent decrease in farms within the Northeast milkshed.

"Our organization had another strong year," Smith said, "ending in a profit of $1,217,000. This marks the fifth successive year of annualized profits in excess of $1 million."

Smith also said that the co-op reports a $2.3 million increase in tax-paid retained earnings; a debt-to-equity improvement to 81 cents on the dollar from last year's $1.10 debt for $1 equity; and member equity, as a percentage of total assets improved 22.9 percent over last year.

Rutherford, in his president's address, talked about the changes at Dairylea in the past 15 years, which covers his service as the co-op's president.

"Our membership understands that, to achieve our goals, we may do things a little differently — different from the past and different from other cooperatives. The continued support and encouragement of our members has enable the cooperative to travel down both unfamiliar and innovative roads, which ultimately have led to greener pastures," he said.

He also said that there is a need for national unity among dairy farmers regarding federal dairy policy.

"We all share the common goal of wanting to improve the financial situation of the dairy farming community. However, too much time is wasted arguing about which road to take, rather than concentrating on arriving at our destination," Rutherford said.

Profitable Breeding Strategies

One of the secrets of a successful and profitable dairy breeding program is the consistent use of top genetic bulls on all cows from which you intend to keep any offspring, according to VPI dairy specialist, Bennett Cassel. Each breeding on your farm, including services to heifers and problem breeders, is an opportunity for making genetic progress in your herd.

On many farms, one third or so of the offspring that are born and raised for herd replacements come from first calf heifers and problem breeders. These heifers and problem breeders should be bred, not to non-dairy bulls or bulls of unknown genetic origin, but to bulls that have the opportunity to introduce some good genetics into the herd at reasonable costs. If you are interested in using A.I. sires on heifers, but find it difficult to detect heifers in heat or inconvenient to constrain them for servicing, consult your veterinarian and A.I. personnel about heat synchronizing techniques, and if necessary, construct appropriate facilities for catching and restraining cattle.

This is not to say that all the good bulls are in A.I. service. However, A.I. bulls generally do have a lot more records making up their proofs, which means you can more reliably predict the impact they may have on your herd. Herd sires will continue to be used for a variety of good reasons, some of which are: convenience, improved conception in some cases, personal preferences, developing proofs to merchandise bulls, etc. The point is, if you are going to use natural service, select healthy, virgin dairy bulls out of good genetic stock and switch bulls frequently enough to reduce the risk of a "dud" bull leaving a big hole in your breeding program.

What are "top genetic" sires? That varies, depending upon who you talk to, and upon individual breeders' goals. For one breeder it might be sires with high PD values for milk, dollars, protein yield, type, etc. For others, it might be longevity traits, pedigree strength, etc.

If you have been selecting service sires wisely and making genetic progress with each succeeding crop of calves, the best females in your herd should be in your young heifers not yet bred. You probably would not think of breeding your best cow in your milking herd to any old bull of unknown genetic origin; nor should you do this with your best females in the herd, your young heifers!

The trouble is, you don't know which heifer will be your best cow of tomorrow until she freshens and proves herself. However, your DHIA reports can give you a clue if you have been reporting breeding information and animal identifications accurately. It will show up on your reports as parent average (PA) or estimated transmitting ability (ETA). These estimates consider what the calf has inherited from its dam and sire.

On the Penna. DHIA reports parent averages (PA) of calves can be found on their dam's Individual Cow Page.

Several Raleigh DHIA reports show calves estimated transmitting abilities (ETA). It may appear as ETAM, ETA$, ETA%, ETAF, ETAP, etc. You can find it on one of the Individual Cow Records (DHI-303, but not on DHI-203), and on the following optional reports, if requested: Annual Heifer Calf Listing (DHI-209), Heifer Calf Management Listing (DHI-214), and calves Individual Identification Page (DHI-204).

So, for good genetic progress, and to keep your breeding program on a well-planned track, plan what sires you want to use considering: breeding goals that will have a positive financial impact on your business, bull's genetic merit and reliability ratings, semen costs, etc. Here's where you might want to solicit the experience of a breeding consultant.

Then, determine how much semen you will need for the next six months or so. With this information in hand you are now in a position to shop for the semen and breeding services you need in a very methodic, business-like manner. This will help you avoid the temptation of buying a few straws of a new "hot" sire or from overstocking your semen tank.

When the next sire summary is published, be ready to revise your list of chosen sires and prepare your shopping list for the next six months or so. Remember, proofs of young sires you chose earlier may change when their second crop of daughters come into milk. With the rapid genetic progress that is taking place in the industry, the good bulls of today can quickly become quite ordinary with the influx of genetically superior bulls of tomorrow.

How well have you been doing keeping your herd genetically ahead of the average, and toward the front of the pack? The genetic profile of the sires you have been using is a good indicator. You can find this on the Raleigh DHIA Herd Summary Report. One goal may be to strive for an average percentile rank of service sires of 80% or above..

You may have many opportunities to improve your herd genetically. So do your competitors, so don't miss the opportunity to stay abreast of or ahead of your competition. The next challenge then is being able to manage the herd in a manner that allows cows to express their genetic potential and remain in the herd long enough to reward you with some good offspring and profit margins.

Madigan Says He Is Bullish On Agriculture

LINDA WILLIAMS

IMLER (Bedford Co.) — Senator Roger A. Madigan, chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, was the guest speaker for the Pennsylvania Farmer's Assocaition (now Pennsylvania Farm Bureau) banquet held at the Imler Fire Hall.

Madigan, a dairyman for 13 years, and currently operating a 260 acre crop and certified tree farm, spoke on the importance of farming as it relates to the economy and said he has always been, "bullish on agriculture."

He also announced his intentions to run for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket next year.

"Farmers make up only 2% of the population," Madigan said. "It is important, that despite their busy schedules, farmers find time to take an active part in politics."

"If you don't do it, no one will do it for you," he warned.

Madigan also urged farmers to find the time to take a part in farm organizations.

"We no longer have majority rule," he affirmed. "But the minority group that screams the loudest gets heard."

He was dismayed to find that while agriculture is the #1 industry in Pennsylvania, it was completely ignored in the latest economic development program.

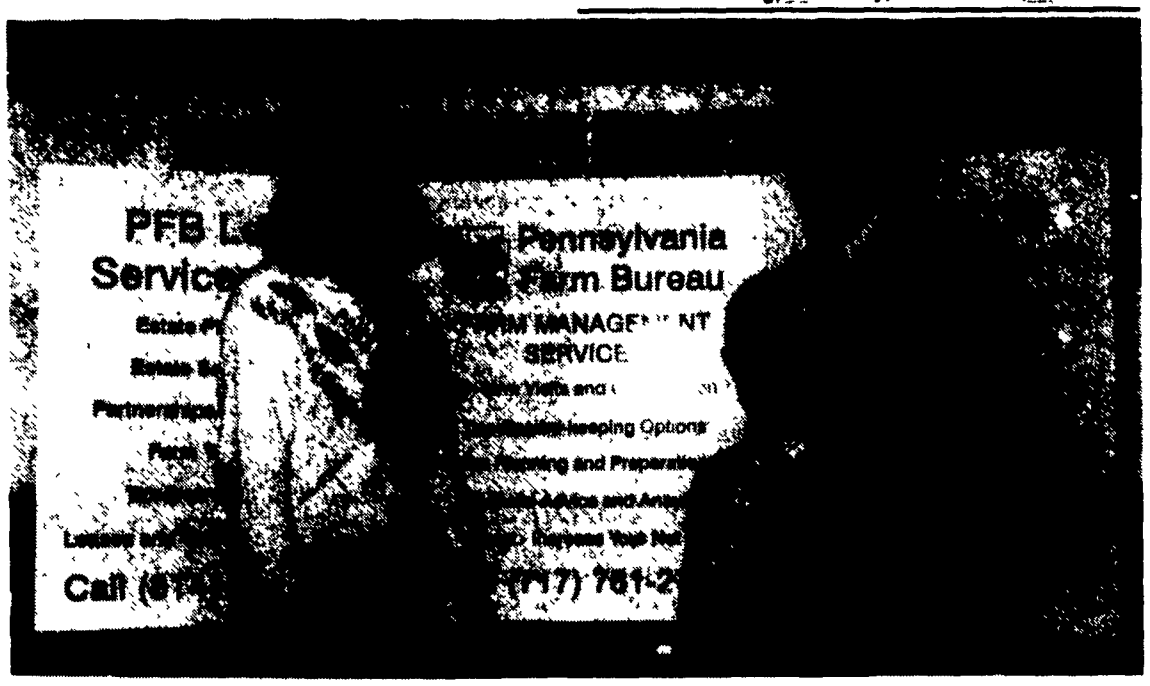
"We need farmers," he stated, "But, no one can stay in business if he doesn't make a profit."

"We must develop an economy that includes agriculture."

Madigan said he recently worked on a committee to bring about workmen's comp reform in Pennsylvania. "I know how important that can be to the farmer," he continued.

On a dismal note he stated that the largest export from the state of Pennsylvania is our young people. "We need to give them a reason to stay here and work here," he added.

Madigan said he was happy to see Amy Mearkle, Bedford County Dairy Princess, and first runnerup in the state. "We need young poeple with her kind of enthusiasm."



Amy Mearkle, Bedford County Dairy Princess, speaker Senator Roger A. Madigan, and Ken Mowry, Bedford County president, in front of an illustration highlighting the importance of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (formerly PFA).

Amy gave her speech on the importance of calcium in the diet which won her the first runnerup title in state competition.

Also speaking at the dinner were Harold Shaulis, Jr., PFA district director; and Rodney McKenrick, regional organization direction. Doris Wertz, PFA District II Womens Commitee member, gave a report on the recent conference she attended in Harrisburg.

Alfred State College Dairy Team Is Fourth Nationally

ALFRED, N.Y. — The dairy cattle judging team from Alfred State College ranked fourth overall, with a team member earning two first-place wins, in competition at the World Dairy Exposition in Madison, Wis.

Competing with 16 other colleges, Alfred State students placed third in Jersey judging, fourth in Guernseys, and fifth in both Brown Swiss and Ayrshires. The team also ranked fifth in oral reasons.

Timothy K. Elsbree of Troy, a senior in the animal science curriculum at Alfred State, was first-place individual in Jerseys and in Brown Swiss, third in oral reasons, and fourth in Ayrshires.

Elsbree, son of John and Donna Elsbree of Troy RD 1, placed seventh overall among individuals.

The team was coached by Matthew Stewart of Alfred State's Agriculture and Horticulture Department faculty.

He reported rankings for Elsbree and his teammates, including:

-Katherine A. Lunde, daughter of Ingrid Lunde of Apalachin and the late Lars Lunde, fifth in Guernseys.

-Colleen M. Palmer, daughter of Ben and Marilyn Palmer of Holland, NY, ninth in Guernseys and 12th overall.

-Brian L. Zug, son of Edward and Debra Zug of Peach Bottom, 20th overall.

At the earlier Eastern States Exposition competition in Springfield, Mass., Alfred State's team finished in third place, just one point out of second place, coach Stewart said.

The team placed first in Ayrshires, and took thirds in Holsteins and Jerseys.

Among individuals, Elsbree was first in Ayrshires, second in Holsteins, and third in Jerseys. Lunde placed first in Holsteins, fourth in Ayrshires, and seventh in Brown Swiss. Zug took sixth and seventh in Ayrshires and Jerseys, respectively.

State Accepts Agribusiness Award Nominations

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff is accepting nominations for the Department's 1994 Agribusiness Achievement Awards.

The awards are presented to Pennsylvania companies that have made a special contribution to the development and expansion of Pennsylvania agribusiness. First place awards will be given in two separate categories.

"The Agribusiness Award is part of our effort to recognize the people who contributed so much to Pennsylvania's leading industry," Wolff said.

"Prestigious companies that have won this award include Hatfield Quality Meats, Knouse Foods, Newhart Foods, Pellegrino Food Products, and other firms that helped establish a quality standard for Pennsylvania Agricultural products."

Awards will be presented at the annual Farm Show Dinner on Saturday, Jan. 8, at the Sheraton Inn Harrisburg East in Harrisburg.

The deadline for receipt of completed award applications is Nov. 12. Contact the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Market Development at (717) 787-4210 for more information or to request an application.

Legislation To Fight Animal Disease

WASHINGTON, D.C. — More than half of the House of Representatives and Senate now support legislation to allow veterinarians to administer life-saving drugs to animal patients when clinically appropriate.

Sixty-one Senators and 242 Representatives have cosponsored S.340 and H.R. 1423, the Animal Medicinal Drug Use Clarification Act.

"Veterinarians must be permitted to treat sick animals and protect people from animal diseases," said Rep. Charles Stenholm (D, Texas), sponsor of H.R. 1423. "I intend to continue to fight for passage of this important legislation."

An existing amendment to the federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (FD&C Act) restricts the use of animal drugs prescribed by veterinarians to the species and usage(s) specified on the label. Passage of the parallel bills would change the FD&C Act to allow veterinarians to prescribe the safest and most beneficial drugs to fight disease and alleviate suffering among animal patients.

The legislation would codify current FDA policy and permit veterinarians to use the safest and most beneficial animal drugs when treating animal patients.

The discretionary or "extra-label" use of drugs would be restricted to those times when the veterinarian makes a professional and clinically appropriate judgement that the health of the animal to be treated is threatened or suffering or death would result from the failure to use such treatment.

"Strict adherence to the FD&C Act makes it impossible to practice modern veterinary medicine," said Sen. Howell Heflin (D, Ala.), sponsor of S. 340. "This law conflicts with the veterinarians' oath to use specific knowledge and skill to maintain animal health and safeguard the public."

Ultimately, veterinarians would be permitted to provide for animal health and well-being, and help ensure the safety of food from animal origin for human consumption.

NFU Host To International Meeting

MINNEAPOLIS — The dairy group of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers (IFAP) met here Oct. 8-10 to discuss dairy industry issues and trends.

The meeting was hosted by the National Farmers Union (NFU), Wisconsin Farmers Union and Minnesota Farmers Union.

"At the end of the day, farmers concerns from one part of the world to the next are very similar and it is important that farmers from throughout the world meet to cultivate understanding and look at our industry from an international perspective," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU.

The group discussed the current situation and the world dairy outlook. Delegates were told that 1993 production is projected to decline by 1 percent due mostly to the expected 3 percent fall in output in industrialized countries, largely reflecting major declines in production by former Soviet block countries.

Delegates discussed the diverse issues facing the dairy industry throughout the world, varying from improving genetics and feeding programs to increase milk production in developing countries to producing milk in the manner required by consumers in industrialized countries.

"Foreign aid programs where milk powder is given or sold very cheaply to our consumers have put some of our dairy farmers, particularly the small, family farmers, out of business in our country," Ian Webster, chairman of the National Association of Dairy Farmers of Zimbabwe, told the group.

Willi Kampmann, representing Germany, said the primary issues facing German dairy farmers concern the wholesomeness and perceived social responsibility with which milk products are produced.

The group also examined different models for handling industry-related research. John McQueen of the Australian Dairy Farmers Federation led the discussion by outlining the system in Australia, whereby the dairy organization's funding for research and development is matched one for one by the federal government.

Research, which is interactive between scientists and farmers, is carried out in the government facilities, but involves greater industry input than traditional research protocols.

There was also an array of opinions on world trade and the effect of liberalization on dairy farming.

"I see the writing on the wall. Government support of agriculture worldwide is declining and will continue to do so," said Ernie Glienke, representing the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation. "I advocate free trade, so that my family has the option of expanding our operation as much as we want and having the new markets via reduced trade barriers for this additional production."

"At the same time, Irish farmers find it terribly unfair to have to operate on static quotas with reduced prices, in order that a farmer in another part of the world is able to expand his production," said Michael Drea, chairman of the IFAP dairy group and representative of the Irish Farmers' Association.

"Agricultural products produced within varying economic, political and social situations can't be expected to compete with one another," said Manfred Bobner of the Swiss Central Dairy Association.

"Although opinions on most every issue we discussed vary, there is a deep-rooted sense of commitment among the participants to the economic well-being of the family-farming system," said Swenson.

Following two days of intensive discussions, the delegates participated in an industry tour of Wisconsin's dairy country. The tour included stops at a single-family, 45-cow dairy, a two-family, 300-cow dairy farm and a cooperative cheese processing plant. Tour participants also had the opportunity to discuss dairy issues with some 20 Wisconsin Farmers Union members that joined the tour.

Also attending the meeting from Farmers Union were: Dennis Rosen, president of the Wisconsin Farmers Union and Dennis Wiese, president of the South Dakota Farmers Union. Meeting delegates included dairy organization representatives from Argentina, Australia, Canada, Denmark, the European Community, Germany, Ireland, New Zealand, Sweden, Switzerland, the United States and Zimbabwe.

The International Federation of Agricultural Producers is comprised of 81 national farm organizations representing 57 countries, including both developing and industrialized countries.

IFAP serves as a forum for farm leaders to exchange information and ideas and to discuss issues of common interest. Because of IFAP's size and scope, it also serves as a communication vehicle and international spokesman for the world's farmers. NFU is a member organization of IFAP, with NFU President Leland Swenson serving as one of IFAP's three vice presidents.

Promotion Program Continues

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff congratulated the nation's dairy farmers for voting to continue their efforts to promote their product.

The Dairy Promotion and Research Order was established in 1983 to implement a national program for the promotion of dairy products and nutrition education.

"We're very pleased that the referendum has been approved," Wolff said. "Over 71 percent of the voters elected to continue the order, showing that there was broad support for this important program."

The dairy promotion program is financed by a 15-cent — per hundredweight assessment of all milk produced in the 48 contiguous states and marketed commercially by dairy farmers.

The program is administered by the Dairy Promotion and Research Board, comprised of 36 dairy producers appointed by the secretary of agriculture to represent the dairy industry.

PSU To Sponsor Dairy Teleconferences, Workshops

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, in collaboration with the College of Agricultural Sciences, is to sponsor three Dairy Nutrition Teleconferences and Workshops on February 10, 17 and 24, 1994.

These workshops are to be offered via satellite at more than 45 locations in Pennsylvania and several nearby states.

The dairy nutrition teleconferences and workshops combine local hands-on activities conducted by extension agents and interaction with University faculty via satellite. Research, teaching, and extension faculty will have a chance to share their collective expertise with dairy producers and feed industry representatives across Pennsylvania and in several nearby states.

Producers can ask questions about their own farm operations to expand their knowledge of nutrition and feeding management. Participants are encouraged to bring one forage sample to the first workshop to be analyzed for use in the second workshop.

Each workshop will start at 10 a.m. and end at 3 p.m. with one hour for lunch. Each workshop will feature several video segments presented via satellite, exercises, and discussions on nutrition-related topics conducted by county agents, and a question and answer period with several specialists in dairy nutrition, agronomy, and agricultural engineering.

Participants will be limited to the seating capacity at each site. Early registration is requested by Decembger 6, 1993, but those who do not register early will be permitted to register late if space permits.

The $25 registration fee covers costs for the forage sample analysis and other items used during the workshops. An additional charge will be made if meals are provided, but this will vary with site. To register or to obtain more information, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county.

Legislation To Fight

"We are pleased with the widespread Congressional support," said Leon Russell, D.V.M., president of the American Veterinary Medical Association. "We are confident that this legislation will receive swift passage in the coming months."

S. 340 has been assigned to the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee while H.R. 1423 has been assigned to the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

The American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA), founded as the United States Veterinary Medical Association in 1863, and renamed the AVMA in 1898, represents nearly 55,000 members — over 80 percent of active veterinarians in the United States. Each year, approximately 2,100 new graduates enter the profession from AVMA colleges throughout the country. The AVMA is headquartered in Schaumburg, Illinois.

Dauphin County Holds Fall Field Day

While some new tillage equipment is to be demonstrated, much of the program is to focus on using common equipment already owned and used by farmers.

Also, the demonstrations are designed to be practical and insightful. "After each type of primary and secondary tillage is demonstrated, residue measurements will be made and recorded for comparison. The effect of deep tillage on residue will also be demonstrated. Farmers attending will learn how to measure the percent of residue cover," according the brochure.

There is also to be free testing of grain moisture testers. A representative from the state Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Weights and Measures is set to be there to perform the free-for-participants, tester-accuracy checks.

Lebanon Farm Women Do Whatever They Can, Wherever They Can, Whenever They Can

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Business, music, food, and gossip filled the agenda for the 53rd annual convention of Lebanon County Society of Farm Women.

About 160 members from 21 county societies attended the day-long event held at Kenbrook Bible Camp on October 13. A report on their yearly activities showed that Farm Women, according to president Fern Hitz, "wish to do all they can, wherever we can, and whenever we can."

Farm Women expressed their concern for the needy by donating $1,000 to Mid Western flood victims and another $1,000 for the heifer project, a food producing animal given to a family in need who then passes on the first female offspring to another family in need.

Members who are in their eighties and nineties were honored by receiving a special Farm Women emblem pin. Ninety-year-old members included Hilda Balmer, Society 1; Sadie Knapp, Society, 2; and Mary Light, Society 1.

Eighty-year-old members honored were Edna Kelly, Society 3; Aletha Neidigh, Society 3; Miriam Roush, Society 6; Edith Wike, Society 8; Florence Reed, Society 10; and Mary Arnold, Society 12.

Members held a special memorial service for members who had passed away during the past year. These included Minnie Hunsicker, Society 2; Ida Moyer, Society 6; Florence Kaylor, Society 5; Blanche Wenger, Society 5; and Violet Alger, Society 3. Helen Deaver, 89-years-old sang a solo "I Found the Answer."

Educational and entertainment prevailed in the afternoon session by talks by Martha Gregory, 4-H director; Jennifer Bashore, Lebanon County Dairy Princess; a Red Cross worker, and by Grace Miller alias Tillie Hiernerschnitch.

Tillie kept the audience in stitches by her tales of life in culturally deprived Yummerdall. As a lady in waiting, she said that still waiting as she she is too young for medicare and too old for men to care. In her speech, Tillie included snippets of gossip about many of the Farm Women members. The character Tillie is impersonated by Grace Miller of Landis Valley, a former school teacher, librarian, and bus tour guide.

State president Arlene Witman encouraged members to continue their many good deeds by reminding them, "It's nice to be important, but it's more important to be nice."

More than 160 members attend the 53th annual convention of the Lebanon County Society of Farm Women.

National Consumers Week

National Consumers Week begins tomorrow. For the past 13 years, the last week in October has been set aside to raise awareness of the need for consumers to be active and informed members of the local and national economy.

This year's focus is on consumer fraud. The seven most common areas of consumer fraud are auto repairs, home improvements, credit agreements, investments, mail-order business, telemarketing and health care.

This past week I had a personal experience with consumer fraud. Actually it probably can't be labeled "consumer fraud," but it was consumer confusion, and I took the opportunity to express my concern and get the problem resolved.

What was the situation? I bought a tablecloth that had a sticker price of $9.99. Because it and five or six other identical tablecloths were stacked in a wire basket with a bright yellow label of $7.99, I assumed (incorrectly) that they must be on sale. I didn't notice the price as it was recorded at the register, but when I got to the car, I checked the receipt. I had been charged $9.99 not $7.99. I didn't think that was fair, so I walked back in and spoke to a manager. (Those of you who shop with children may be tempted to take the $2 loss and go home, but I encourage you not to. Your children learn tremendously from your example.) The manager agreed that the display was confusing and that their stocking staff had made a mistake. She refunded my $2.

I felt pleased to get the $2, but I felt more pleased that this store was willing to recognize and rectify a deceptive label.

In a second incident, this past week I observed a family asserting its right to complain at a local restaurant. Several times during the meal, the parents commented to their waitress about unsatisfactory items. This establishment posts a policy that if a customer isn't pleased with the meal, they (the restaurant) will pay the bill. Well, this family took them up on that policy and had their entire meal bill waived. Now I don't condone taking advantage of these policies without reason, but I do encourage consumers to give appropriate feedback to businesses and officials.

Too often consumer fraud continues because individuals don't speak out about their experiences. It takes the combined efforts of many concerned consumers to stop fraudulent, unsatisfactory practices. You can be a part of that process. First, stay informed. Read recognized consumer watchdog magazines. They often highlight illegal or misleading labels or advertising claims. Also your local legislator's newsletter or the state attorney general's pamphlets also list announcements regarding fraudulent consumer practices.

Secondly, report any questionable experiences to the consumer protection agency, your local police department, Better Business Bureau or the parent company involved. Unless action is taken, unless fraud is reported, change cannot occur. Fines cannot be issued. Criminals cannot be stopped.

These efforts take time, but without consumer input, disreputable business tactics will continue. Do your part to fight fraud during National Consumer Week beginning tomorrow.

Food: Your Miracle Medicine?

Here's an idea you may find easy to swallow: Scientists say you can eat your way to good health.

Researchers at Harvard, the National Cancer Institute, MIT, Johns Hopkins and other major institutions have done hundreds of thousands of studies tracking down the connection between diet and health.

Now, you can read all about it in a new book, Food — Your Miracle Medicine: How Food Can Prevent and Cure Over 100 Symptoms and Problems (Harper Collins, $25.00), by bestselling author Jean Carper, a noted medical writer.

Diet, she says, can help prevent and treat numerous diseases, not only alleviating suffering and postponing death, but saving millions of dollars a year in health costs. Overwhelming scientific evidence finds food a remarkably effective and inexpensive preventive medicine and remedy, often equal to, or superior, to expensive and hazardous drugs," she adds.

Here are some hints from the book:

- Eating a cup of yogurt a day can cut cold symptoms 25 percent.
- Two daily garlic cloves cut heart attack risk in half.
- Half an avocado a day improves cholesterol more than a low-fat diet.
- Spinach can prevent depression.
- Celery can dramatically lower high blood pressure.
- Too much fat impairs immunity.
- Eating oats may help you stop smoking.
- The fat found in seafood may incite cells to make chemicals that break up undesirable blood clots, fight off joint pain and frustrate cancer cells.
- While your doctor is your best advisor about preventing and curing diseases, a healthy diet, which can be achieved with the aid of this new book, can be a tremendous help.

Choose Apples For A Healthy Snack

Although apples are available all year, nothing can compare to the crisp, succulent apples that are available now during the fall harvest. Apples are in good supply and will be through the coming winter months. October is the peak month for apples and has been designated National Apple Month.

If you want apples to eat fresh as a snack or in salads, two excellent varieties are Red and Golden Delicious. Firm-fleshed varieties, such as Rome Beauty and York Imperial are excellent for baking. Winesap, McIntosh, Cortland, Jonathan, and Granny Smith are multi-purpose apples great for snacks, baking and most other culinary purposes.

Frequently chosen as a symbol of nutrition and health by graphic artists, apples contain modest amounts of several nutrients. They are also relatively low in calories. An average-sized apples has about 80 calories. Apples are also an excellent source of pectin fiber, which is associated the helping keep blood cholesterol levels in balance. Pectin fiber, along with its moisture content and bland flavor, make applesauce a low-fat substitute for some of the shortening in cakes, muffins and cookies.

Apples are "Nature's Toothbrush" but should not be a substitute for proper brushing. The juice of the apple and its delightful aroma help induce salivary activity. The apple's mild fibrous texture helps provide detergent action. All of this combines to make apples an ideal end to a meal and natural toothbrush for those times when regular brushing is not possible.

In the fall, when supplies are plentiful, it is usually cheaper to buy apples in large quantities (by the half or full bushel) than by the pound — provided you like apples and have refrigeration or suitable storage for your bargain. A refrigerator is the best place to store apples. A properly harvested apple, kept at room temperature, becomes overripe and mealy within a few days. The same apple held at 32 degrees Fahrenheit in the humidifier compartment of a refrigerator remains in good condition for four to six months. If your humidifier compartment is full, plastic bags with a few air holes also make good storage bags for apples.

Fresh apples can also be stored in a cool cellar or garage. Line a container with polythylene to help prevent moisture loss and cover with a moist towel to help retard moisture loss. Remember, apples injure if frozen. Therefore, cover the fruit with a blanket, corrugated box or other material if nighttime temperatures fall below 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Readers Share Favorite Pork Recipes

Quality pork begins on the farm. New breeding and feeding techniques results in pork being lower in fat, lower in calories, and lower in cholesterol than ever before. A 3-ounce serving of roasted pork tenderloin has only 133 calories, 4.1 grams of fat and 67 mg of cholesterol. That's less calories, fat, and cholesterol than skinless, roasted, chicken breast.

But you can have the best cut of meat and ruin it by improper cooking. These recipes from readers should help you prepare many tasty dishes that will become family favorites for years to come. Enjoy.

The Best Of The Fall Harvest

As the temperature drops, many Americans move inside and heat up their ovens, using fall fruits to make delicious pies, cakes and breads. Although many people don't think of cranberries until Thanksgiving, most of year's best berries are in the supermarket in October. Contrary to popular belief, light colored cranberries are just as ripe and taste as good as their deep crimson counterparts. The paler color merely means the berry grew underneath the vine and received less sunlight.

Many varieties of apples are also harvested in October. Good baking varieties include tart Granny Smiths, pale green Northern Spies and crisp, red Macouns. Sweeter varieties, such as Red Delicious, and moister apples, like McIntosh, can become less tasty or mushy when cooked.

Use the season's best produce in autumn flavored Cranberry Apple Bread.

Cranberry Apple Bread

2 cups peeled, chopped baking apples
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons oil
1 egg
1½ cups flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup OCEAN SPRAY® Fresh or Frozen Cranberries
½ cup chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 350°. Grease 1 8½ x4½ x2-inch loaf pan. Combine apples, sugar and oil in a medium mixing bowl. Add egg, mixing well. Combine dry ingredients in a separate bowl. Add to apple mixture, mixing just until dry ingredients are moist. Stir in cranberries and walnuts.

Spread batter evenly in pan. Bake 1 hour or until a toothpick inserted into bread center comes out clean. Makes 1 loaf.

Team Prepares For National Event

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Kansas City, here we come. These words are echoing throughout Adams County these days as teens and their leaders prepare to make the trip to the National 4-H Meats Judging Competition in Kansas City, Mo.

Earlier this year, 4-H members began to learn about meat. These young individuals learned retail cuts of beef, pork and lamb, primal cuts (where it came from on the animal), as well as how the meat swhould be prepared.

After much practice and studying the Adams County senior team, consisting of Dan Ludwig, Beau Ramsburg, Travis Green and Kim Funt, as well as the junior team of Mark Wessel, Wayne Flickinger, Megan Wessel, and Eugene Hunt, departed to compete at the Penn State Achievement Days in State College in late July.

For the first time, both Adams County junior and senior meats judging teams placed first in the state competition.

This feat has earned the senior team a trip to Kansas City to compete in the national competition in early November. If was noted that junior teams do not compete at the national level.

These accomplishments did not just happen. Much time and energy came from the team's coach, Joan Grim, as well as Dan O'Brien, a butcher for Nells Shurfine Store in East Berlin. The team was also supported by Nell's in East Berlin; Wayne Nell & Sons Meats, Inc., East Berlin; Charles L. Nell Quality Meats, Littlestown; and Bull's of New Chester.

For more information or questions, contact Joan Grim, at (717) 259-0202.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

An empty room.

We have an empty room in the house.

Glancing at it on the way from upstairs to downstairs, I get just a faint twinge of "empty nest syndrome" feelings on occasion.

"So, how does it feel to have all your kids gone?" inquired a smiling young farmer friend recently, his own two children of elementary school age.

"I really miss them on days like Christmas and Easter; and you miss them a little bit all the time," was my reply, tacking on with a grin, "Except when the flu is going around."

It was nearly a year ago that the youngest packed up a limited amount of belongings to move into his own apartment near Penn State. Over the ensuing months, a flow of other possessions followed. The bikes, the skis, the skateboards disappeared from miscellaneous corners where they'd been kept.

Though the eldest departed more than four years ago, her room had been pretty much left as it was. On visits home, she sorted, pitched, gave away and stored items in the attic against the day when she could move it into her own home somewhere.

So there was no rush to change the rooms of either. Hers gradually became more of a storage room for Christmas gifts, off-season clothing, favored upstairs snoozing place for the cat and an overflow office once in awhile.

New possibilities were presented when the youngest announced he was not returning home this summer because he so enjoyed his apartment, college campus life, and his job. With some furniture shifting, we now had not one, but two spare rooms of sorts. Guests were forewarned that they could have a cat jumping onto their bed in the middle of the night.

Then came his recent announcement that he was moving out of his apartment — and into a house out in the country in a beautiful, isolated mountain valley. A rather large house, as it turns out, with lots of rooms. Empty rooms.

"Mom, can I have my bed back?" said the voice on the other end of the telephone. "I need furniture — any furniture. And do you by any chance have a spare washer and dryer?"

We tore down the bed. Packed up bedding. A piece of carpeting. Spare odds 'n ends of furniture. The Farmer gathered some miscellaneous tools he figured might come in handy in settling into a country house. Grandma contributed some unused curtains. The decor will be what most of us started out with — and may still have to some degree. A blend of Early American, This 'N That, and Contemporary collected from home pieces.

So, now. What to do with this empty room?

No, we are NOT housing excess baby calves in it.

A sewing-crafts room has always been a wish of mine, but the upstairs is unheated. Ever tried to sew with frozen fingers? Same reason nixes it as a permanent office or a library/reading room.

Wait. For two years, I haven't been able to easily access our stored, back-years business records. Or been able to reach my supply of computer paper without clunking my head. Or even gotten close to a cupboard filled with photos, miscellaneous fabric — and frankly, I'm not sure anymore what else is in there.

Building the miniature railroad layout in our original only spare room had, admittedly, been an idea of efficiency. The youngest had engineered the layout at chest-high level, leaving the space beneath for continued storage. But it literally covered the whole room, with only a tiny walkthrough along the wall to the attic. And, guess who was left to crawl into the packed storage space and search for whatever it is you want.

Brandon and Janine Show Champion Pigs

Brandon, who is only 6-years-old, and his sister, who is nine years old, exhibited their pigs at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition held in Harrisburg recently.

Brandon showed the grand champion Berkshire barrow in the open show. The pig named Toopy is six months old and weighs 230 pounds. Brandon also exhibited the reserve champion Hampshire boar.

Brandon is in first grade at Myerstown Elementary School. Janine is a fourth grader at the same school and a member of the Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club.

Brandon and Janine are the children of Janet and Ken Winebark, well known swine breeders from Lebanon County. Ken is also a Lebanon County Extension agent.

Incredible Pig

EARLY HISTORY

• The history of pork production speaks to the unique adaptability and amazing utility of that extraordinary animal, the pig.

• The pig was among the first animals to be domesticated, probably as early as 7000 B.C.

• Pork was widely consumed throughout the ancient world and the Roman Empire.

• Pigs were first introduced to North America in 1539 when Hernando de Soto brought them to the Florida mainland.

COLONIAL DAYS

• Early colonists brought pigs to the new settlements on the Atlantic seaboard in the late 1500's.

• The practice of finishing hogs on Indian corn (maize) was first adopted as a common practice in Pennsylvania in the late 1600's.

• Introduction of the Old World's pig to the New World's corn laid the foundation for the modern U.S. pork industry.

• In the colonies, hogs were taken to market in large droves and over trails that later became the routes of the major railroads.

THE NATION EXPANDS WESTWARD

• The Louisiana Purchase in 1803 opened up a large area of the country for agricultural development. Live hogs in considerable number were shipped to New Orleans via the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

• The opening of the Erie Canal in 1825 provided the first all-water connection from the Great Lakes to New York City. It permitted hogs and salted or smoked pork products to be shipped (in barrels) east by water transport.

• In 1827, the Erie Canal system was connected to Cincinnati and, via the Ohio River, to the Mississippi. Trade in hogs and pork products flourished.

• As the nation expanded, farmers relied on their hogs not only to provide sustenance for their families, but also to help them pay for their new homesteads. That unique profit quality earned the hog the title "Mortgage Lifter."

• By 1863, Cincinnati, Ohio was such a major pork processing center that it was widely known as "Porkopolis." By 1865, the Civil War had greatly interfered with access to that city.

• The turmoil following the Civil War, combined with development of the great American railroads, shifted the center of hog production further west and soon Chicago was the world's largest pork packing center. It became known as "Hog Butcher to the World."

RAILROADS AND WAR YEARS BRING CHANGES

• Invention of the refrigerated rail car in 1870 enabled fresh pork to be shipped over long distances without spoilage. Until then pork had to be salted or smoked before shipment.

• Development of a national railroad system, coupled with invention of the refrigerated rail car, brought about centralization of pork processing for much of the nation by the 1880's at big packing plants located at major railroad centers such as Chicago and Omaha.

• From the late 1880's through the late 1940's, consumer demand for lard, primarily for cooking purposes, was so considerable that pork producers obliged consumers by raising relatively fat hogs that would meet these demands.

• During World Wars I and II pork went to war, providing the basis for "C" and "K" rations for soldiers in the field The fat derived from the incredible pig also went into the making of nitroglycerine for use in explosives to help win the war.

• The end of World War II brought great changes. The market for lard and other by-products of fat from hogs started to decline and consumers began thinking more about health and diet and the desire for leaner meat products.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF A LEANER PIG

• U.S. pork producers, in the early 1950's, concentrated their efforts on developing a leaner type hog that would meet increasing consumer demands for leaner meat products, relatively low in cholesterol and fat.

• Today, a combination of factors, including improved genetics, better feeding practices and the foresight and detremination of America's pork producers, has resulted in a market hog 50% leaner than it was in the late 1960's.

• America's pork producers have set a goal of making pork the meat of choice in the United States in the 21st century. It has long enjoyed that distinction in most other parts of the world.

Hog Trivia

• How did "Uncle Sam" come to represent the U.S. Government?

During the War of 1812, a New York pork packer named Uncle Sam Wilson shipped a boatload of several hundred barrels of pork to U.S. troops. Each barrel was stamped "U.S." On the docks, it quickly became bantered about that the "U.S." stood for "Uncle Sam", whose large pork shipment looked to be enough to feed the entire army. Thus did "Uncle Sam" come to represent the U.S. Government itself.

• What U.S. city became known as Porkopolis?

The open lands of the West encouraged large-scale hog raising operations which, in turn, created a need for expanded commercial pork processing facilities. Packing plants grew throughout the Midwest, with centrally located Cincinnati soon becoming so strongly associated with pork production that it became known, informally at least, as "Porkopolis."

• How did Wall Street get its name?

Free-roaming hogs were notorious for rampaging through the precious grain fields of colonial New York City farmers. The Manhattan Island residents chose to limit the forays of these riotous hogs by erecting a long, permanent wall on the northern edge of what is now Lower Manhattan. A street came to border this wall — aptly enough named, Wall Street.

• Where did the saying "living high on the hog" come from?

It originated among, army enlisted men who received shoulder and leg cuts while officers received the top loin cuts.

• Fact or Hogwash? When hot dogs were first sold, street vendors called them "red hots", and they didn't come on a bun. Instead, a pair of white cotton gloves came with each one to keep fingers cool while eating.

Fact. It happened at the St. Louis World's Fair, where hot dogs were first introduced to the public along with the ice cream cone in 1904.

• Fact or Hogwash? The longest single sausage was over a mile long.

Fact. A single sausage measuring 5,917 feet in length was cooked in Barcelona, Spain on September 22, 1986.

• What did President Harry Truman have to say about hogs?

"No man should be allowed to be President who does not understand hogs."

• What staple food was provided to Washington's troops at Valley Forge?

Salt pork from New Jersey was shipped behind British lines to Valley Forge to feed the hungry Continental Army in the winter of 1776-77.

• What's the origin of the word "barbecue?"

It's derived from French-speaking pirates, who called this Caribbean pork feast "de barbe et quene," which translates "from beard to tail". In other words, the pig roast reflected the fact that the hog was an eminently versatile animal that could be consumed from head to toe.

$56,000 was paid for a cross-breed barrow named "Bud", owned by Jeffrey Roemisch of Hermleigh, Texas and bought by E.A. "Bud" Olson and Phil Bonzio on March 5, 1985.

• What's the heaviest hog ever recorded?

A Poland China hog named "Big Bill" weighing 2,552 pounds and measuring 9 feet long with a belly that dragged the ground, owned by Burford Butler of Jackson, Tennessee in 1933.

• What's the origin of the saying "pork barrel politics?"

The phrase is derived from the pre-Civil War practice of distributing salt pork to the slaves from huge barrels. By the 1870s, congressmen were referring to regularly dipping into the "pork barrel" to obtain funds for popular projects in their home districts.

• What's the origin of the saying to "go whole hog"?

The expression came from the 18th Century when the English shilling was at one time called a "hog". Thus, a spendthrift, one willing to spend an entire shilling on the entertainment of a friend in a pub, was willing to "go whole hog".

• What's the origin of the saying "a pig in a poke"?

The reference is to a common trick of 17th Century England of trying to palm off a cat on an unsuspecting "greenhorn" for a suckling-pig. When he opened the poke (sack) he "let the cat out of the bag", and the trick was disclosed.

• Did you know that...

As much beloved as fresh pork is in America, it is not the United States, but China, which is the number one producer and consumer of fresh pork in the world.

• Did you know that...

The ancient Chinese were so loath to be separated from fresh pork that the departed were sometimes accompanied to the grave with their herd of hogs.

• Did you know that...

In ancient China fresh pork enjoyed royal status. Around 4000 B.C., the Chinese people were ordered to raise and breed hogs — by a royal decree from the Emperor of China.

• Did you know that...

Dr. Lisa Doherty and her baby, Amy, do a checkup at the LaMalot Farm near Breezewood. Dr. Doherty feels fortunate to be able to have it all, her baby and her career as a veterinarian.

Veterinarian Takes Baby To Work

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BREEZEWOOD (Bedford Co.)-"I never dreamed it would work out this well," says petite, dark-haired, Dr. Lisa Doherty as she plucks two-month-old Amy Katelyn from her car seat outside the llama barn of Joan Mellott.

"I've always wanted to be a vet, but when I got married a few years ago, I also found I wanted to be a mother. Then, while I was pregnant, I looked into day care options and just didn't like what was available for newborns. I wanted to take care of her myself."

Lisa did give up her full-time job at the Veterinary Medical Center. Them, just four days home from the hospital she got a call to geld a horse. "I found it a welcome change." she admits. "I was already getting tired of wandering around the house waiting for the baby to wake up."

Then others, like the Mellotts, who found Dr. Doherty to be especially good with llamas called. When my husband wasn't home, I started taking Amy along and have found it works out well," she says.

"I always tell my clients that I have to bring my baby along and they say. 'No problem, we love babies.'"

Recently she was called to deliver a calf in the middle of the night. Her husband's strength would be needed so, they both packed up Amy and took her along. The family took the baby into the house and enjoyed her so much they didn't want to give her back.

Another time, a 14-year-old boy offered to hold the baby while Lisa checked a cow.

Actually she admits that it might be easier now than when she was pregnant. She still recalls the night she was called out in her sixth month of pregnancy to aid with a prolapsed uterus.

The cow was located in the midst of a stand of trees about two miles off the main road. Hysterics were being produced by the cow's owner and Dr. Lisa didn't know who would give her the worst problem.

After locating the cow, she managed to get a rope around her neck. The cow, not really preferring the confined feeling took off with Lisa, the farmer, and his wife all hanging on. "I never told them I was pregnant," she laughs now.

"Anyway, we got the uterus fixed and I gratefully accepted a cup of coffee and a place to clean up. Then, came the big question. Could I help with a sister-in-law who was miscarrying and wouldn't go to the hospital. I told them I was sorry, but I drew the line at humans. I don't think they ever did understand why I couldn't do something for a human if I could save a cow. But, I did give them my best advice, 'call an ambulance.'"

Lisa grew up in a suburban area of Florida but always loved animals. At age 11, she began assisting a neighborhood vet and it was a dream she never erased from her mind. Her immediate goal was to be a wildlife conservationist.

However, jobs in the field were scarce and pay low, so she went back to school and became a medical technichian.

"But, a few years later, I still felt the call of the animals and knew I would never be satisfied if I didn't become a vet."

Fresh out of veterinary school, Lisa entered the Peace Corps where she was sent to Morocco. Her main patients were camels, sheep, goats, and mules.

"We didn't study much about camels in vet school," she muses now, "but, I did do all the studying I could do on my own before going. Just let me say this about veterinary work, camels are horrendous. They have huge mouths and are not a treat to doctor. Fortunately, I didn't have a lot of calls. Most of them were military camels."

Despite being in a country that considers women as second-class citizens, Lisa found she was readily accepted. "The women accepted me and so did the men. But, I always kept my head, arms, and legs covered, so they approved.

"Once in a while I would get a call and the farmer would say, 'Well, little lady, what are you doing in those big boots?'

"'Treating your animal' would be my quick response, and from there on I never had any trouble.

Lisa always knew she could have better hours, more comfortable working conditions, and higher pay if she would work strictly as a small animal vet in a big city.

"But, it's not the same," she is quick to say, "I love the variety of being a country vet. I love talking with the farmers and I empathize with the problems they face today. I wouldn't trade what I do here for anything. Besides, this is where I met my husband, Patrick."

Patrick is an automobile mechanic, but enjoys accompanying his wife on calls when possible. "His strength is a big help with large animals," Lisa says.

Despite loving her work, Lisa is always aware of the dangers of working on large animals. "You have to plan ahead," she says. "And, use restraints. Also, you never want to hurt an animal so it's best to give them anesthesia when possible."

Eventually, Lisa says she will probably return to her job at the Everett Center where she gives a lot of credit to Drs. Tarpley and Foor for helping her with her career. "They have always been willing to send me to seminars to study more about some of the exotic animals we are seeing today such as llamas," she says.

Lisa has a llama of her own, a gift from her client, Joan Mellott of La Malot Farm.

Until Amy reaches the toddler stage, Lisa says she is thankful to be in a situation where she can work and take care of her baby all at the same time.

Record Setters To Produce Pies Aplenty

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Bernie Lehman is in the market for some apple trees. But the Wrightsville fruit grower doesn't want just any kind of apple trees, he is specifically. searching for a variety named Eve's Delight.

A single Eve's Delight apple tree grows in the nearly four acres of fruit orchards on the Ellsworth, Jr., and Kathy Lehman family's dairy, crops and produce farm at Wrightsville R2. This year, it produced a whopping 2.49-pound fruit that broke all previous apple records at the York Fair, besting about 10 other hefty-sized apples in the running for the title.

Lehman has been entering produce in York Fair for several years, some of it in friendly competition with a neighboring grower. Last year, his uncle, John Lehman, won the fair's biggest apple category with a 2.18-pounder from a Stark's variety tree in his Hellam Township orchard.

Bernie Lehman set out to beat that.

"We've always thinned this tree to get good size on the apples; we just thinned it a little harder this year," says Lehman. "Usually, the apples grow to about a pound and a half."

In quest of extra-large apples, all but 15 to 20 fruits were removed from the dwarf Eve's Delight tree early in the summer. Neighboring trees were thinned just a bit harder, as well, to assure plenty of light reaching the potential prizewinners. The 10-year-old tree was irrigated along with the rest of the orchard during a few dry spells, but received no other special treatment.

Bernie did check it regularly, though, observing two apples early in the season that were outsizing the others.

"I did pick it a little early, to make sure it didn't fall off and onto the ground," he relates. "When we weighed it, we figured it would be close to being a winner."

Like all the York Fair produce entries, only numbers identify the winners. Bernie recognized his winner right away, displayed in a glass-covered case. But the wrong name was initially given out to local newspapers. A phone call by his dad corrected the error and got Bernie his award.

Along with the champion apple, Bernie took blue ribbons on his Jack-Be-Little pumpkins, string beans, cucumbers, peppers and various awards on other produce entered.

The Lehmans retail their produce at their farm roadside market, just north of Route 30 at Wrightsville.

"The big apples sell almost as soon as we sit one out, usually within a few hours," says Bernie, of their customers' interest in the giant fruits. His record-setter, refrigerated on display at the farm market for a few weeks following the fair, ripened quickly. By early October it was beginning to show signs of bruising and was earmarked for one last round of enjoyment by the family — in a pie.

Next year, Bernie plans to thin the tree even a little harder. In fact, he jokes that if he could find a few more of the Eve's Delight variety, he would grow one apple per tree, aiming at breaking the world's record set by a 2.73 pound Washington state-grown one.

Meanwhile, the York Fair's largest-ever pumpkin, weighing in at a whopping 375 pounds, is currently in use as a fall-season decoration.

Sam Brubaker, Sunrise Court, Lebanon, grew the monstrous pumpkin in one of two hills he planted in a small plot behind his home. Brubaker, who cultivates only a few pumpkins in a small backyard garden set out to grow a record-setter.

"We always visit the York Fair; and a couple of years ago, he looked at the giant pumpkins and said 'I can do that'," relates Sam's wife, Audrey, who was admittedly skeptical at the time. "He's not a gardener, otherwise."

Nevertheless, Brubaker began planting a couple of hills of pumpkins in the rich soil of their yard. Last year's effort showed promise, Audrey recalls, until one day her husband checked the progress of his largest pumpkin and found the back of it rotted away from the season's extreme moisture.

Brubaker's plans for this season's planting initially went awry when the seeds he sent for never came in the mail. Two hills of "just a pack of pumpkins seeds" were then planted, but later than originally intended. Some packaged dry manure worked into the soil and occasional fertilizer feedings kept two giant, and one smaller, fruits growing through the season. Only an occasional boost of drip irrigation was given during dry spells.

"He had read that for every leaf a pumpkin has, it grows a certain number of pounds," says Audrey Brubaker of her husband's pumpkin-growing technique. By pinching back the vines, they were confined to the small growing area while concentrating their strength into producing a few large fruits. By early summer, the eventual-winner was already good-sized. Sam checked it every evening after work — and Audrey took pictures of it every weekend.

"It took six guys to get it on the truck," chuckles Audrey Brubaker of the difficulty in loading the huge pumpkin, moved onto a wooden pallet, to haul it to York for the fair competition.

While the couple would like to keep the pumpkin for Farm Show display, they were uncertain it would store that long without rotting.

"We know a lady who bakes for a living; it may eventually go there for her use," speculates Audrey of the pumpkin's ultimate fate as a probable — and plentiful — pie source. She adds that the "meat" of the pumpkin variety is very thick and a deep orange color. The "baby" one at an estimated near 50 pounds may entertain neighborhood youngsters as a Halloween jack o'lantern.

Sam's goal, his wife notes, is to grow the largest pumpkin in the state. He has received numerous tips on growing giant pumpkins, including the advice to feed the plants milk. The milk is believed to enhance pumpkin growth because of the added calcium available to the plant.

"Oh, yes, he'll save the seeds from this one," affirms Audrey Brubaker of her husband's plans for next spring's pumpkin patch. "He's been teasing his friends that he'll sell them some of the seeds."

A third York Fair record setter was a 20-pound cantaloupe, which unfortuantely rotted while on display. It was grown by Dean Becker, Spring Grove R2.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

On our Canadian trip our train with sleeper cars took us to Prince Rupert. This town was founded in 1906 and they ship grain, pulp, lumber and coal. Many Indians live here and they can trace their history back 10,000 years.

We had a bus tour of the town and then drove to the North Pacific Cannery Village. It is no longer operating but we saw the old machinery that was used for canning fish. We also saw the houses of the workers and had a salmon lunch here.

In Prince Rupert we went to a Safeway grocery store, and I was very impressed not only with the size but also with the abundance of fresh produce in the grocery store. There was an Indian Museum near our hotel and we walked there in the afternoon.

The next morning we arose at 5:30 in order to board the "Queen of the North" which was a very large ferry. We had a 15-hour ride to Port Hardy. Besides the water and trees everywhere, there was both a restaurant and a cafeteria on the boat. They showed several movies during the day and had entertainment in the Dogwood Lounge. We met a couple from Netherlands and another couple who had a travel trailer and they had to pay $500 for the days journey on the ferry.

Next day we saw a 22-ton burl that grew at the base of a 350-year-old spruce. Parts of Vancouver Island get 200 inches of rain per year and other parts only get 27 inches. Here they clear-cut the trees; then replant and lumber again in 60 years. We stopped at Chemainus which is a town known for the murals that they've painted on the walls of their buildings.

Our hotel in Victoria was Chateau Victoria and we were on the 14th floor and had a livingroom, kitchen, diningroom plus a large bedroom with two double beds. This was much more than necessary to spend one night — not all of our hotels were so elaborate. The next article will end the account of our trip.

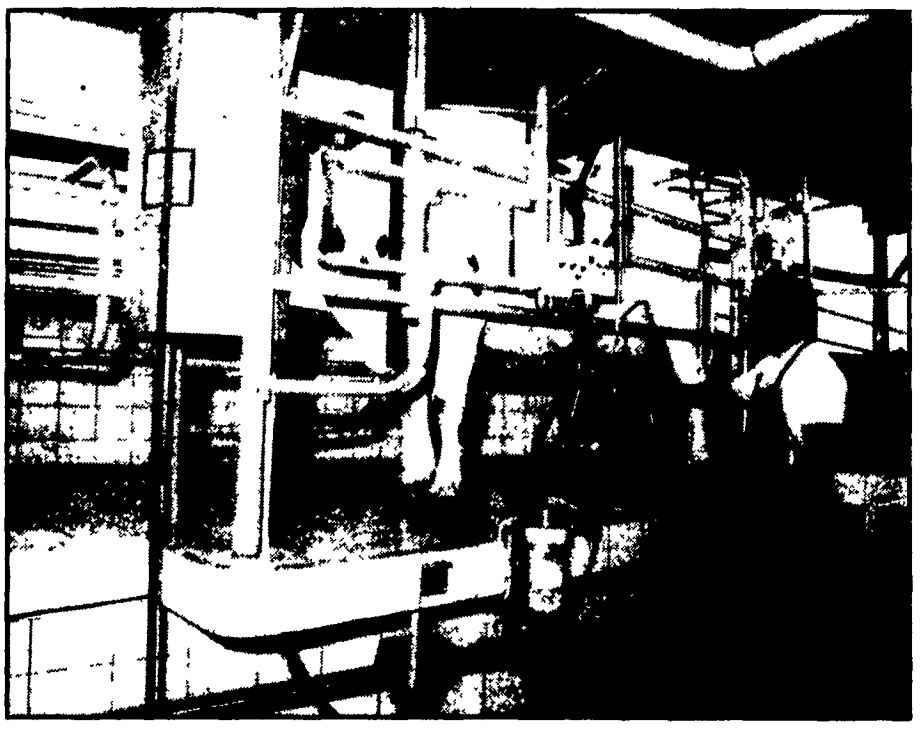
MILKING STALLS



With Non-Stop Cow Traffic

Using less stalls at maximum efficiency lowers the total cost of your automation and improves labor efficiency. Comparison shows it takes as much as 50% fewer AutoFlow stalls to achieve the same throughput as with similarly automated herringbone and parallel systems.

As milking equipment becomes more sophisticated and more expensive, the investment per stall becomes an important factor. The Surge AutoFlow parlor maximizes efficiencies per stall without sacrificing cow throughput.

Revalor®-s is the new growth promotant from Hoechst-Roussel Agri-Vet Company, for improved performance in a single implant.

Revalor®-s helps you maximize your profits safely, efficiently and better than any progesterone/estradiol implant on the market.

A cattle feeder's profits depend on better feed efficiency and higher average daily gains. Until now, cattle feeders have not had a single implant to obtain these results.

Now Revalor®-s combines the best chemistry in a single implant to give you improved performance, so you can design the program to best meet your needs.

Advertorial

The University of Wisconsin now evaluates forages using Milk/Acre.

The Department of Dairy Science & Agronomy at the University of Wisconsin-Madison has developed a program that evaluates forage production in terms of milk/acre. The only recognized program of its kind, it allows farmers to assess a forage based on quality (R.F.V.) and yield (tons/acre).

In determining milk/acre, the program assumes a cow weight 1,350 lbs. in mid-lactation stage producing 70 lbs. of milk/day.

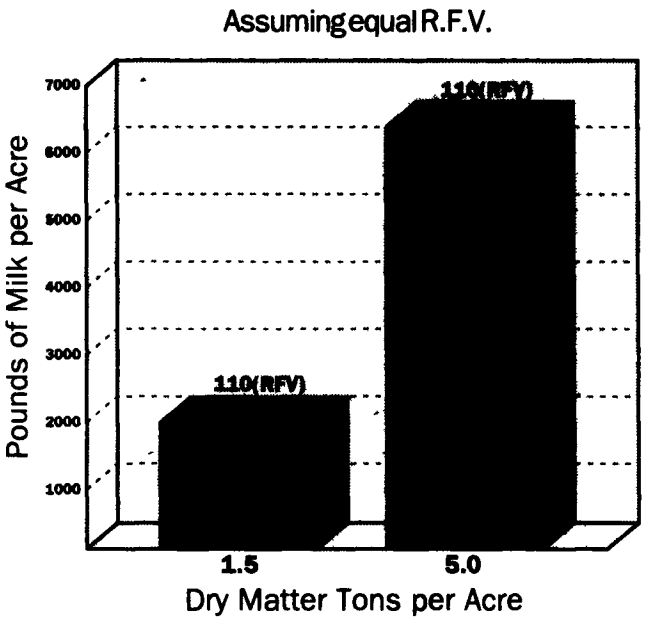
Information from a forage analysis is used to calculate relative feed value (R.F.V.). Then using yield/acre, R.F.V. and the above assumptions, a calculation is made for milk/acre.

For example, a forage with an R.F.V. of 110 and a yield of 5.0 tons of dry matter produces 6,343 lbs. of milk/acre. Contrast that with a forage having an R.F.V. of 122 at 5.0 tons of dry matter, which produces 8,365 lbs. of milk/acre.

The higher the R.F.V. at an equivalent yield, the higher the milk/acre — and the greater the forage quality. By the same token, the higher the yield at an equivalent R.F.V., the higher the milk/acre.

For more information about the program and how to apply it your dairy operation, call Hoffman Seeds at 1-800-776-7929.

Calculating Milk per Acre from R.F.V. and Tons per Acre of Dry Matter



s Outstanding 4-H Club

A large turnout of members from the Glen Rock Community 4-H Club was on hand to cheer when their club was named the outstanding club for the year in York County.

How can you be sure you're getting the most milk/acre?

Select a company dedicated to forage testing

You can buy your forage products from a lot of companies But only a handful of those companies can back their products with hard core data gathered over years of research We've been conducting forage quality tests on our products for four years now That's four times as long as most other seed companies

And we've assembled that research from field-scale tests Most companies base their findings only on small plot tests. Our broad testing programs give us — and you — a much better indication of product performance

Make sure your forage supplier can deliver quantity ... and quality

When it comes to testing a forage product, most companies start and stop at tons/acre But Hoffman Seeds goes beyond that to test actual forage quality

How? By getting individual forage analyses and using the results to assess production in terms of milk/acre. So you not only get a measure of yield based on tons/acre, but also a measure of quality based on Relative Feed Value (R F V.)

Insist on a broad product offering for Northeast conditions

These Future Champions Will Sell.

The 1992 calving season at the Miller Farm was an exciting one. The number of exceptionally good calves was overwhelming. But we decided that wasn't enough. We wanted to improve the quality from top to bottom. After making several contacts and telephone calls, we headed west. After traveling several thousand miles and picking only the top calves from herds in Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska and Colorado, we came home with truly an exceptional group of calves. These calves will be all you ever expected in Western bred club calves. Along with our truly deep set of home bred calves, they will be worth your time to inspect. Over 20 Grand or Reserve Grand Steers were sold through this sale last year. These cattle will be wormed, vaccinated, pre-conditioned, and halter broke.

Dr. Marvin Hall
Penn State University

Fluctuations in milk prices, feed costs, and government programs are forcing dairy farmers to become more efficient with their farm operation.

Since feed accounts for approximately one-half of the total cost of producing milk, and high quality forage optimizes the productivity of the animals, increasing the quality of forage available is one of the best methods of improving overall feeding efficiency. But what is forage quality worth to your operation?

What Is Forage Quality?

Forage quality is defined as the sum total of the plant constituents that influence an animal's use of the feed. Along with its quality, the overall potential feeding value of a forage feed is influenced by the form in which it is fed (e.g., particle size), the palatability of the forage, and by the quality of other feeds in the ration (associative feed effects).

What Is Quality Forage Worth?

The value of high quality forage in a balanced ration is evident in Table 1. When three hays of low, medium, and high quality, along with corn silage and a mixed feed grain, are used to balance a ration, total feed cost for the high quality hay ratio is $0.11 less per cow per day than the medium quality hay ration.

Income over grain cost is $0.45 more per cow per day for the high quality hay ration than for the medium-quality hay. For 100 cows over a year, this difference is greater than $16,000.

Low quality hay does not allow an animal to consume enough digestible energy to be highly productive. A hay of lower quality than the three hays in Table 1 would substantially depress the performance of high producing dairy cows.

Keeping Quality In Perspective

If you want to produce high quality forage, keep in mind the ranking of quality factors and their relative contribution to quality. While all six factors described are important, using high quality varieties will be advantageous only when the other five factors are operant.

Quantity (yield) of forage is also a major consideration. Evaluate your total forage requirements, and then select the crop and the appropriate acreage of that crop that best meet the needs of the group or groups of animals to be fed. It ultimately comes down to economics — high quality forage can help keep farmers in the dairy business.

FARM MANAGEMENT

IMPROVING EFFICIENCY

Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm
Management Agent
Penn State

In my last column, we looked at various efficiency measures and how to evaluate an enterprise.

It is quite simple for economists to tell us what we must do to improve efficiency, but a lot more difficult when we are in the real live farming situation. This time we will look at some specific practice changes which we might want to consider.

Productive Efficiency

Theory says that the efficiency of an enterprise can be impoved by reducing variable costs, or increase the income, or both. For crop enterprises this can be done by:

- Using nutrient management and integrated pest management practices to apply only the required inputs and no more.
- Where possible, use no-till and such practices to save machine time and labor.
- Plan ahead to ensure that crops are planted and harvested as close as possible to the optimum time frame.
- Maximize the use of rotational grazing during the growing season, to enable ruminants to harvest most of their hay-equivalent requirements at better quality and lower harvesting costs.

Livestock enterprises will be more efficient when adequate attention is paid to:

- A comfortable (for the animal) environment with sufficient ventilation and a dry resting place.
- The basics of nutrition to provide high intakes of excellent quality water and feeds, particularly forages for dairy animals. Don't pay big bucks for foofoo dust!
- Optimization calculations to see what is best for your situation.

Particularly where land is expensive, it is inefficient to substitute intensive grazing for the much higher energy production per acre which can be supplied by corn silage. When grazing and/or a good forage program is supplying high protein, and corn silage furnishing cheap energy, grain intakes (particularly protien) can be reduced for a very efficient feeding program.

- Reducing the culling rate of breeding animals. This will provide for more breeding stock sales or more rapid herd expansion. It can be achieved by attention to all the details necessary to ensure reproductive performance. sound feet and legs, hygiene, and disease prevention.
- Raising healthy replacement breeding animals that are capable of achieving their genetic potential.

Labor Efficiency

There is a big variation in labor usage between farms using the same production system. It is important to keep track of specific tasks and record just how much labor is devoted to each task on the farm. This can be very revealing, and can provide management with a lot of information to improve human resource management.

It might be possible to raise labor productivity considerably by:

- Taking time for management.
- Organizing and structuring the workforce, assigning responsibility and authority to workers.
- Planning ahead, with backup plans for when circumstances change.
- Doing preventive maintenance to ensure that all equipment is ready to roll as soon as conditions permit.
- Modifying routines to improve workflow and reduce backtracking.

The first thing we tend to think of to reduce labor is bigger and better equiment. This may or may not help. As a rule of thumb, a labor-saving investment of $80,000 would need to save at least $12,000 of labor costs a year before it is cost-effective.

Part-time and shift-work labor to do routine chores can sometimes be more economical than new equipmeht. Changing the system from conventional to no-till or hay to haylage might also be considered.

There will always need to be compromises between labor saving and capital investment. The average commercial dairy probably spends $600 per cow per year for labor and family living. If this figure is any higher, it makes it very difficult to retire debt.

All changes and system upgrades need to be planned to improve labor efficiency, not just on how cheaply they can be done.

Capital Efficiency

Reducing the investment overheads for the enterprise, or spreading the same investment over more productive units, is easier said than done — especially when we are trying to improve productivity and labor efficiency at the same time. But there are some strategies that can help:

- Have a long-range plan of capital investments in attainable steps.
- Build equity, not debt. Pay off small chunks of debt quickly and then move on to the next step in the plan. This ensures that debt service goes for principle and not just interest.
- Avoid long repayment periods. If you can't pay for facilities in 10 years or less, you are probably better off without them.
- Don't become land poor. Making debt payments of $200 per acre for bare land that can be rented for $70 makes sense only for the person who has little or no intermediate and short-term debt.
- Get help from consultants. Engineers can help to identify potential bottlenecks and their elimination. Extension agents and specialists can advise on production practices, equipment, etc.

Your farm management agent is available to help with labor management, business analysis, and strategic and cash-flow planning. We hope that we can help you to identify potential problems on paper — before you make them in concrete.

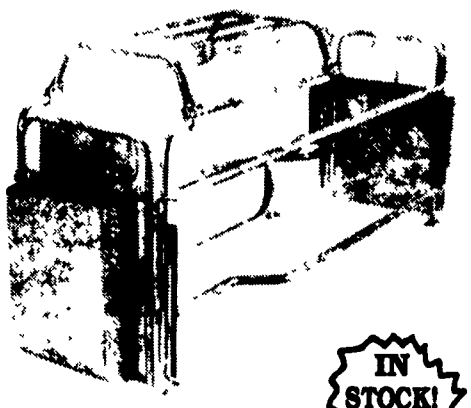
BSM

MODEL 90 FARROWING CRATE



Constructed from heavy gauge materials, this crate is designed to reduce crushing with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars make for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminate the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets. This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

Potato Production Up In 1992

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's production of fall potatoes for 1992 totaled 4,940,000 cwt., up 41 percent from 1991, according to the Pennsylvania Agriculture Statistics Service. The value of production was 33.3 million dollars, up 27 percent from 1991.

Potato sales totaled 4,394,000 cwt., or 89 percent of the 1992 crop. In 1991, 3,308,000 cwt., or 95 percent of the total production, was sold. The average price received in 1992 was $6.75 per cwt., compared to $7.50 in 1991. Of the total production, 83,000 cwt. were used on the farms where produced and 463,000 cwt. went to shrinkage and other losses. Farm use accounted for 38,000 cwt. in 1991 and shrinkage and other losses were 154,00 cwt.

Farm marketings of the 1992 crop, by months, were as follows: August, 14 percent; September, 22 percent; October, 14 percent; November, 12 percent; December, 8 percent; January, 9 percent; February, 8 percent; March, 7 percent; April, 3 percent; May, 3 percent.

Nationally, acreage of all potatoes harvested in 1992 totaled 1.32 million, down 4 percent from the previous year. Yield per acre averaged a record high 323 cwt., up 19 cwt. from 1991. Production totaled 425 million cwt. in 1992, an increase of 2 percent from the previous year.

The volume of potatoes sold was a record high 386 million cwt., up 2 percent from 1991. Value of the 1992 potato crop was estimated at $2.34 billion, up 14 percent from a year earlier. The average price was $5.52 per cwt., compared with $4.96 in 1991.

Utilization placed a record high 229 million cwt. of potatoes in the hands of processors, 127 million cwt. was sold for fresh market, and other sales (diversion, seed and livestock feed) totaled 29.4 million cwt. Non-sales at 39.7 million cwt. were up 3 percent from 1991. Shrinkage and loss were estimated at 33.8 million cwt., feed and home use totaled 1.18 million cwt., and 4.75 million cwt. was kept by growers for seed on their own farms.

Hall Of Fame Search Begins

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Governor William Donald Schaefer announced that the search has begun for the 1994 Governor's Agriculture "Hall of Fame" candidates.

"This 'Hall of Fame' recognizes the tremendous contributions of farmers and their families to agriculture in Maryland," Governor Schaefer said.

The award was created by Governor Schaefer in 1991 to honor leaders in the agricultural industry who exemplify high standards of achievement and commitment to the community.

Nominating committees are being created in each county. A governor's selection committee — chaired by the secretary of agriculture and including the director of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau, Master of the Maryland State Grange, and three other members named by the secretary, including the winner from the previous year — will review all county nominations and select award winners.

For more information on the selection process and the name of the coordinator for your county, call Suzie Harrison at (410) 841-5770.

Angus Journal Names Land Stewardship Winner

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — William Ausley of Willow Oak Farm, Nokesville, Va., was named the Eastern regional winner of the 1993 Land Stewardship Award presented by the Angus Journal, official publication of the American Angus Association.

Ausley started Willow Oak, an 80-acre, registered Angus farm, in 1984. Located in Prince William County, Va., Willow Oak has two ponds, a perennial stream, and is bordered by a fairly large flowing creek which eventually makes its way to the Chesapeake Bay. Along with a herd of 35 registered Angus cows, Ausley and his family keep a flock of sheep, five horses, and a couple of donkeys.

Although Ausley is classified as a small, part-time farmer, his conservation practices are full time. Virginia now requires that all farms which impact the Chesapeake Bay have an approved conservation plan by 1995. Willow Oak Farm signed the first plan approved in the state in June 1991. The plan covers pest management, nutrient management, and the agreed-upon conservation management.

Ausley installed 100-foot grass buffer strips along the farm's main creek. This past summer he fenced off Willow Oak's last remaining stream. A below-the-pond-dam water trough was built to serve as an alternative water source for his livestock.

An 18-acre pasture adjacent to the creek has been put into intensive grazing. He uses cattle in rotation with sheep to graze the paddocks for optimum utilization of forages and optimum control of pests and weeds.

Fifteen acres of alfalfa produce a hay supply for winter feeding. Bill has used intensive grazing of the alfalfa to eliminate spring weevils. The weevils leave their eggs in the stubble that remains after mowing. These eggs hatch the following spring and infest the fields.

Bill's environmentally sound solution is to let his flock of sheep serve as pest controllers. The sheep are put on the alfalfa in the fall, when it goes dormant. They graze it all the way down, thus eating the eggs. This saves the need for pesticides which can run off into groundwater or their creek. It also saves money.

William Ausley of Willow Oak Farm, Nokesville, Va., was named the Eastern regional winner of the 1993 Land Stewardship Award presented by the Angus Journal, official publication of the American Angus Association.

His hard work and conservation knowledge is paying off in other ways, too. Willow Oak Farm won Virginia's Clean Water Farm Award five years ago. This past spring he was named Prince William's Conservationist of the Year.

Ausley and his family were honored at the 1993 World Angus Forum September 20 in Rapid City, S.D. Other recognized winners include: (Central) Cecil Davis, Davis Angus Farm, Marshfield, Mo.; (South) Ken Thompson, Pebblebrook Angus, Tompkinsville, Ky.; and (West) Gregory Gould, 7 Bar Heart Ranch, New Ulm, Mont.

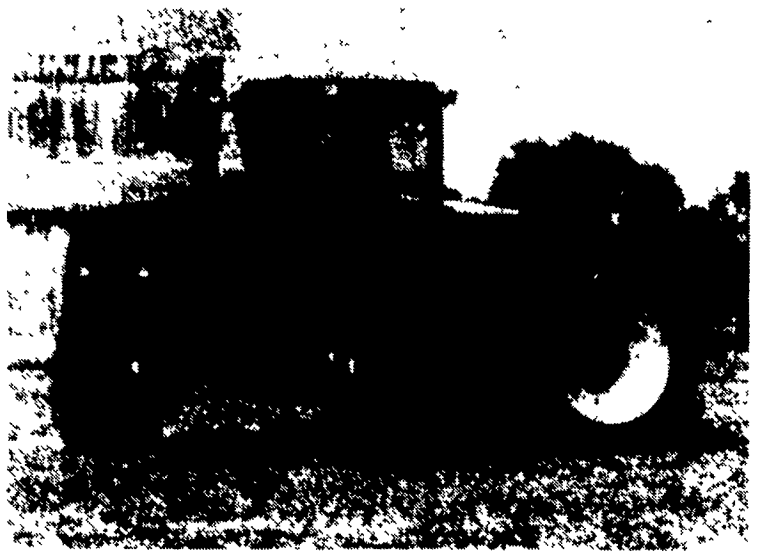
Case Delivers Year-Round 4WD Tractor

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case recently began production of its largest tractor capable of 30-inch row-crop work. Equipped with an optional steerable front axle, the 300-horsepower Case International 9250 can negotiate turns within a radius as tight as 12.2 feet.

"This option makes the 9250 a year-round tractor, efficient for row-crop as well as tillage work," said Kelly Kravig, Case product manager, four-wheel-drive tractors. "In combination with the 9250's articulated design, the steerable front axle gives the machine unprecedented maneuverability with the stability of a large tractor. Operators have found they can even make in-row corrections without tail wag."



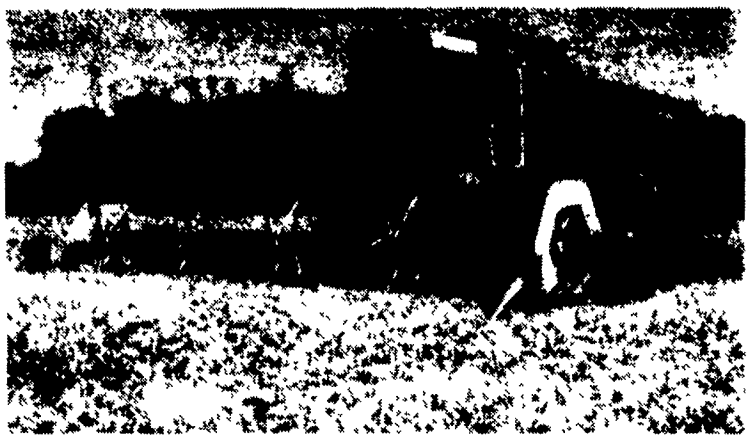
This 300-horsepower Case International articulated four-wheel-drive tractor has a turning radius of just 12.2 feet and is capable of 30-inch row-crop work.

The 9250 Row-Crop Special Incorporates the same state-of-the-art technology as the standard 9250. This includes a 12-speed, full powershift transmission with Case-exclusive Skip-Shift™ shifting which takes the tractor from first to eighth gear in just three seconds for more accurate chemical application and safer transporting.

Pressure-flow-compensated hydraulics, another feature pioneered on Case International tractors, provide flow to the four standard remotes to ensure the right amount of pressure and flow without wasted horsepower.

In addition, the cab features exceptional visibility, low-effort controls and a fully adjustable air-ride seat like other Case International four-wheel-drive articulated tractors.

"By combining the best of existing technologies with the advantages gained in this design, we're providing customers with greater flexibility and enhanced value. This is a clear demonstration of the kind of leadership through technology they expect from Case," said Kravig.



Massey Ferguson 8570 rotary combine features new 240 HP Cummins 8.3 liter "C" series diesel engine with Power Boost to 250 HP to maintain maximum combine performance in tough harvest conditions and unloading on-the-go.

Rotary Combine Includes 'Power Boost' Engine

NORCROSS, Ga. — New 1993 production MF 8570 rotary combines feature a Cummins 8.3 liter "C" Series diesel engine rated at 240 HP at 2200 RPM with Power Boost to 250 HP at 2000 RPM.

Features include:

• New rotor drive. 1993 production MF 8570 corn/soybean and rice rotary combines are equipped with a high torque rotor drive that provides a 17-percent increase in torque capability for tough, green straw harvest conditions.

• New grain sample inspection opening. Now it's easy to take clean grain samples while harvesting. A clean grain sampling chute from the discharge auger to an opening in the front left-hand corner of the grain tank allows the operator easy access to a grain sample.

• New longer unloader auger. A new unloading auger is also standard equipment and provides a 21-foot reach from the center of the combine to the discharge point with the "scoop" style unloader boot installed. This will permit on-the-go unloading with 5-foot clearance from the end of a 30-foot grain table.

• New passenger seat. A passenger seat, located to the left of the operator's seat, will be standard equipment on 1993 models. This padded seat hinges to provide access to a large storage box.

Many other new standard features include a straw chopper with two spreader board positions, a newly designed, easy to operate stone trap lever, and a set of three concave blanks. An optional separator hourmeter is available for tracking separator hours independent of engine hours recorded on the standard base equipment hourmeter.

York Farm Credit Approved Under Lender Program

YORK (York Co.) — York Farm Credit, ACA has been approved by the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) under the Certified Lender Program to process loans guaranteed by FmHA.

Cook said that she and the Harrisburg office staff were pleased to see the continued interest by York Farm Credit in the utilization of the guarantee programs for agricultural lending in south central Pennsylvania. Rush expressed his satisfaction with the utilization of current FmHA guaranteed programs and his expectation that the Certified Lender Program would improve and streamline the process for not only FmHA and Farm Credit but also for the primary benefactor, the farmer.

Cook and Rush shared their belief that the Certified Lender Program would improve the availability of credit for young farmers as well as for farmers who for one reason or another are in financial situations that represent more than normal risk for normal commercial credit standards.

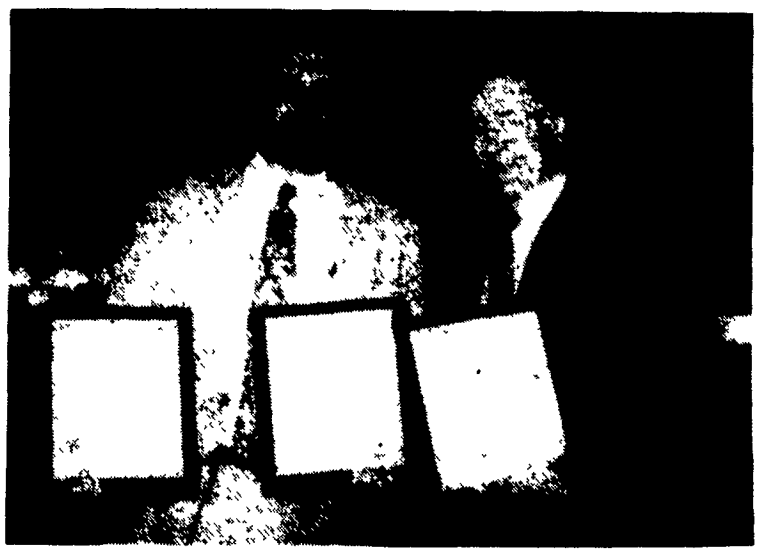
Alderfer Auction Wins Ad Contest

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — National Auctioneers Association (NAA) has announced the winners of its 1993 advertising contest.

NAA members from across the country sent in more than 500 advertisements, brochures, radio and TV commercials and audio-visual presentations.

Sanford Alderfer Auction Company of Hatfield, Pa. received awards in three categories: real estate brochure, general household and estate liquidation brochure, and best auction business newsletter.

Judges had a tough time selecting winners in several of the categories because of the number of outstanding entries submitted. The contest was judged by a panel of media profesionals from the Kansas City, Mo., area, where NAA is located.



Alderfer Auction Company was recently honored with several awards by the National Auctioneers Association. From left, Sandy Alderfer, president, Sanford Alderfer Companies, and Eddie Haynes, CAI past president.

Sandy Alderfer, president of Sanford Alderfer Auction Company, attended the NAA awards banquet in Denver, Colo., the site of the 1993 NAA Convention, to accept the awards. The awards banquet was held in conjunction with the convention.

Hoffman Seeds Offers Savings

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds offers farmers a wheat Profit Pak™. Each Pak contains 54 units of a single Hoffman wheat variety, while offering farmers up to $60 in savings.

Farmers can select their Pak from among four varieties — Hoffman 89 Brand, Hoffman 28 Brand, Hoffman 45 Brand, and Hoffman 21 Brand.

• Hoffman 89 offers a package of yield and test weight. In three-year trials conducted by Penn State and the University of Maryland, it produced yield and test weight advantages of up to 5 percent over competitive varieties. And its test weights were better than 58 pounds/bushel every time. Hoffman 89 also delivers a broad spectrum of disease tolerance including leaf rust, soil borne mosaic, and septoria.

• Hoffman 28 is a soft red wheat providing maximum straw production. It topped 1990 University of Delaware trials for straw yields at 3.1 tons/acre. Hoffman 28 can be used in place of rye for growers wanting silage with a later maturity.

• Hoffman 45 is a fully awned variety featuring high test weights. A medium maturity variety, it tolerates high nitrogen rates and is recommended for areas where poultry manure has caused lodging problems.

• New for the fall of 1993, Hoffman 21 yields especially well in Virginia and Delmarva. A medium variety with medium short plant height, it is an excellent variety when followed by double crop soybeans.

Deere Expands 7000 Series Tractor Line

MOLINE, Ill. — In response to farmers' increasing need for highly versatile and adaptable tractors in the 90- to 100-horsepower range, John Deere has added the 92-hp 7200 and 100-hp 7400 to its 7000 Series tractor line, introduced last year.

The new models are available in standard, Hi-Crop, and Hi-Clearance configurations with a variety of options, so farmers can tailor these tractors to suit their specific farming and economic requirements.

"The 7200 and 7400 tractors offer numerous equipment combinations to meet the specific needs of our customers," said John Payne, division marketing manager, John Deere Waterloo Works. "In addition, these tractors share the same designs and advanced technology that are featured on the three larger 7000 Series tractors. All five models are manufactured here in Waterloo."

The Hi-Crop tractors feature a cast-iron, rear drop axle and extended front axle that provide 40.4 inches of rear-axle crop clearance for both 2WD (two-wheel-drive) and MFWD (mechanical-front-wheel-drive) models. Front crop clearance is as much as 35.3 inches on 2WD tractors and 29.3 inches with MFWD. The 7200 and 7400 Hi-Clearance tractors use tall front and rear tires with the standard chassis to provide a rear-axle crop clearance of 29.6 inches on 2WD and MFWD machines. Front-axle crop clearance is as much as 30 inches and 22.9 inches, respectively.

The 7200 tractor is powered by a 5.9-liter (359-cubic-inch), 6-cylinder John Deere diesel with a 30-percent torque rise. The 7400 features a 6.8-liter (414-cubic-inch), 6-cylinder John Deere diesel with a 34-percent torque rise. Both engines are turbo charged to deliver fuel-efficient power.

A 12F x 4R SyncroPlus™ transmission, standard on both models provides three fully-synchronized gears in four fully-synchronized ranges for shift-on-the-go convenience. The optional 16F x 12R PowrQuad™ transmission features four powershiftable gears in four forward and three reverse ranges. Shifts between ranges are fully synchronized for smooth shifting on-the-go. Forward-reverse shuttle shifts are fully modulated and can be done without braking or clutching for faster loader operations.

For vegetable and specialty crops, a factory-installed creeper option is available for both tractors. The PowrQuad creeper transmission provides 12 additional forward and reverse speeds with the slowest forward speed just under nine feet per minute with tall tires.

The tractors feature a hydraulically actuated PermaClutch™ 2 wet clutch, for durable and maintenance-free transfer of engine power to the transmission.

A choice of rear axles is available to match 2WD, MFWD, and Hi-Clearance models to specific farming requirements. Depending on tire and wheel combinations, the standard rack-and-pinion axle provides tread settings from 60 to 93.8 inches, and the optional rack-and-pinion axle from 60 to 120 inches. The optional flanged axle measures 65.5 inches from hub to hub and permits tread settings every four inches, from 60 to 80 inches.

The flanged drop axle for the Hi-Crop tractors is 73.5 inches long (hub to hub) and provides tread settings every four inches, from 60 to 88 inches.

John Deere Caster/Action™ MFWD is available as an option on all models. Designed and manufactured by John Deere, the MFWD system can be engaged on-the-go and features a 52-degree turn angle for tight turns and increased maneuverability. In addition to more productivity, the MFWD system provides the convenience of an automatic engaging/disengaging mode.

An electrohydraulic differential lock is standard, and it features a hydraulically operated, oil-cooled clutch that provides smooth engagements and reliable performance.

The John Deere 7200 and 7400 tractors, at 92 and 100 hp, respectively, join the rest of the 7000 Series tractor lineup with the versatility and adaptability for today's farming operations. The 7200 and 7400 offer a choice of either a 12-speed SyncroPlus™ or 16-speed PowrQuad™ transmission, 16-gpm or 26-gpm hydraulic pump, standard or MFWD front axle, open-station or ComfortGard™ cab, and more.

Ripper Designed For One-Pass Deep Tillage

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has announced its new 510 disk ripper that sizes residue, deep tills to 15 inches, and leaves a level soil profile — all in one pass.

Available in 12-foot 6-inch and 17-foot 6-inch working widths, the 510 disk ripper features front tandem disk gangs set at a 20-degree angle followed by five or seven spring-reset standards, depending on working width. Rear tandem disk gangs, adjustable to either an 18- or a 16-degree angle for heavy or light soils and residues, respectively, complete the design.

The disk-ripper-disk arrangement provides several performance benefits. The front gangs size residue, kill weeds, and mix organic matter into the soil. The standards shatter hardpan and open the soil for aeration and better water infiltration. The rear gangs continue residue sizing, weed killing, and mixing organic matter into the soil, plus they level the soil profile to eliminate the need for a leveling pass prior to chemical incorporation in the spring. The 510 disk ripper does not need a separate leveling attachment.

The ability to properly position the ripper standards relative to the hardpan optimizes productivity, fuel efficiency, and the wear-life of ground engaging components. The 510 disk ripper's new intermediate standard features a three-position adjustment that provides the flexibility to match ripping depth to field conditions while maintaining desired disk gang depth. For example, with the disk gangs set to run six inches deep, the standard's underframe clearance settings of 34-1/2, 36, and 37-1/2 inches position the standard point 12, 13-1/2, and 15 inches deep, respectively.

The standard has a trip height of 13 inches and is shearbolt-protected beyond 13 inches. The standard's parabolic shape and 2,300-pound trip force enable it to hold depth better than other standards with higher trip forces.

The 1-1/4 x 3-inch standards are mounted on 30-inch spacings for optimum soil disturbance between the standards in all soil types and conditions. The standards are equipped with 2-1/4-inch points. Optional 7-inch ripper sweeps extend the shattering action between the standards and give more complete weed kill.

The 24-inch-diameter disk blades are mounted 11 inches apart. This spacing reduces the potential for plugging, yet sizes residue to flow through secondary-tillage tools. Heavy-duty combination scrapers provide non-stop operation in wet or dry conditions. A one-blade taper on the front and rear gangs and integral furrow filler on the rear gangs help ensure a level soil profile across the field.

The disk gangs operate to a maximum depth of 6 inches and feature C-spring mounting that helps maintain a consistent depth, yet provides flexibility for protection.

Single-point depth control makes setting operating depth fast and easy. The level-lift hitch keeps the frame level at all operating depths and in transport.

The backbone of the 510 disk ripper features 6x6x3/8-inch steel tubing, for strength and durability to handle the demands of deep-tillage applications. On the larger, 7-standard machine, welded, 4x6x5/16-inch side members also contribute to frame strength and rigidity. The 12-foot 6-inch model weighs 7,500 pounds and has a transport width of 14 feet 9 inches. The 17-foot 6-inch model weighs 10,000 pounds and has a 20-foot transport width.

Power requirements range from 185 to 275 horsepower for the smaller model and 260 to 385 horsepower for the larger one, depending on working depth and soil conditions.

The John Deere 510 Disk Ripper sizes residue, deep tills to 15-inches, and leaves a level soil profile — all in one pass. The 510's disk-ripper-disk design features five spring-reset ripper standards on the 12-foot 6-inch model, seven on the 17-foot 6-inch model.

Bury a little residue. Or a lot.

The new White 445 Chisel Plow makes complying with residue guidelines and requirements easy. Options like rippled coulters and chisel points set at 15" spacing leave lots of residue. Concave coulters and twisted shovels set at 12" spacing leave less residue. And these are just a few of the combinations available.

Our deep-till shank option rips hardpan by tilling 4" to 6" deeper than chisel shanks. This reduces compaction problems. And our leveling bar option provides a smoother surface for your next pass.

Case Has Automatic Round Baler

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case now offers a Case International 8465 Automatic round baler in its line of hay and forage products. With this "smart baler," an operator need only steer the tractor, stop forward travel when the bale chamber has a full bale, and touch a button to get uniformly shaped bales 61.5 inches wide that measure up to 75 inches in diameter and weigh up to 2,200 pounds.

The 8465 Automatic does all the work and monitors its electronic circuits to give large-acreage hay producers and custom operators a higher level of baling productivity. "The 8465 Automatic is our flagship round baler," said David Hess, Case product manager-hay and forage. "It's a more sophisticated machine than its companion model, the Case International 8465 Tractor Hydraulic round baler, also offered in the Case IH equipment line."

In addition to the increased automation provided by the 8465 Automatic, its controls are designed to improve performance and reliability in a greater variety of crop conditions than other round balers. The core of those enhanced controls is a membrane touchpad and liquid crystal display that are easier to operate and more informative than indicator lights. All electronic and auto-sequencing components are housed in the sealed control box for greater reliability.

Bale cycling — from drive declutching, wrapping, tailgate operation and kicker ejection to re-engagement of the pickup and belt drives for the next bale — is done by touching the "Auto Cycle" keypad, Hess said. For convenience, each baling function has a manual override.

When the operator touches the "test" button, the 8465 Automatic checks all of its electronic circuits, solenoids and sensors. At the touch of another button, it counts bales produced. With its slip-clutch and hydraulic oil temperature sensors, this "smart baler" will shut itself down when clutch slippage or oil temperature is excessive.

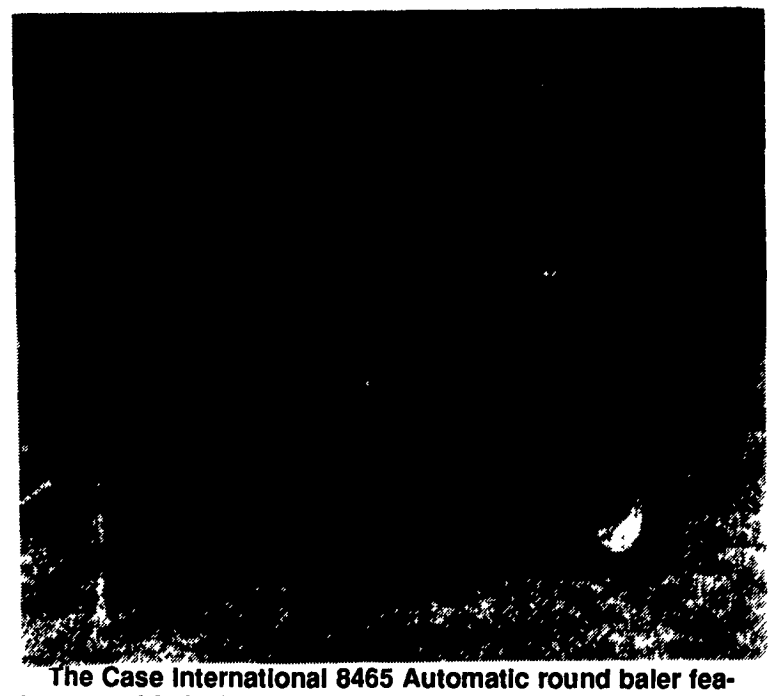
Also included on the LCD panel are improved bale-sensing and sequential driving arrows for better control of bale shape. The sequential driving arrows are a key improvement, according to Hess. "They show the operator where to steer to ensure uniform windrow pickup for optimum bale shape," Hess said.

The hydraulic system on the 8465 Automatic is self-contained, eliminating the need to connect hydraulic hoses to the tractor. Another feature, the twine joggle, enables the operator to touch a button to apply additional twine wraps on the end of the bale.

Other performance features include a wide, four-bar, low-profile pickup with narrow-spaced tines for maximum crop retrieval and minimal leaf loss. A vertical, open-throat design feeds hay, straw, cornstalks, or other crop residue directly into the vertical bale chamber for immediate core information.

One option available for the 8465 Automatic round baler is a mesh-wrap attachment. Mesh-wrap operation is built into the control box. Hess estimates that an 8465 Automatic with the mesh-wrap option can decrease bale wrapping and ejection time as much as 75 percent compared to conventional twine systems. "It's the ultimate in productivity," he said. "It also reduces losses during baling and storage."

Other options include hydraulic pickup lift (requires one tractor remote valve), windrow gathering wheels, and a short crop retainer for baling dry straw.



The Case International 8465 Automatic round baler features sophisticated electronic monitoring and automated systems that significantly increase productivity compared to conventional balers. Uniformly shaped bales from the 8465 measure 61.5 inches wide and up to 75 inches in diameter and weigh up to 2,200 pounds.

BEEF: PINKEYE INFECTIONS

John W. Comerford
Penn State Beef Specialist

Every few years, beef cattle producers report a large number of pinkeye cases in their herds. This year appears to be one of those years. Pinkeye can infect any size or color of cow, but younger cattle appear to be more susceptible. There are no easy answers to why it happens or what can be done to prevent it.

Pinkeye is an infection of the cornea, the transparent, protective cover over the eyeball. The bacterium most often associated with pinkeye in beef cattle is Moraxella bovis (M. bovis), but Infectious bovine rhinotracheitis (IBR) has been implicated in some cases. Although pinkeye infections occur in most mammals, each species is affected by different strains, so the variety that affects cattle is not necessarily spread to humans, sheep, horses, or other animals.

Tearing and redness are among the first signs of pinkeye, but the eye can become completely ulcerated overnight. Scar tissue results from ulcers which form between the layers of the cornea, causing loss of vision in severe infections. In extreme cases, the cornea may even burst.

Factors that contribute to pinkeye infection include flies, dust, grass seed heads, sunlight, and windy conditions. In fact, anything that irritates the eye could be a cause. This seems to be especially true during dry, hot weather such as has occurred across the commonwealth this year. Sunlight is implicated because it is thought that ultraviolet light loosens the cellular junctions in the cornea, allowing a path for the germ to invade. M. bovis is already present in the eyes of most cattle, but flies may be the likeliest source of cross-contamination.

An alarming number of herds have been infected this year, even after having been vaccinated for the disease. Veterinarians and technical representatives with whom I recently spoke reported that pinkeye vaccines are about 70 percent effective. This implies that up to 15 head in a 50-cow herd could reasonably be expected to be infected under conditions optimal for the disease. Secondly, there may be a time lapse between the onset of an infection and control from the vaccine. Although some early symptoms may be seen in cattle, the infection will often subside when the vaccine "kicks in." In pinkeye infections, the disease must already be present and at work before the vaccine starts working. However, infections are often much worse in animals not protected by vaccines.

Treatment for pinkeye includes covering the eye and using intramuscular injections of tetracycline's or ocular injections of antibiotics. Long-acting tetracycline should be given in the neck.

To prevent occurrence or spread of infection:

- Control flies with insecticide ear tags. If the tags were put in last spring, put in new ones.
- Provide plenty of shade for the herd.
- Separate infected animals from the rest of the herd if possible.
- Watch for early signs of the disease and treat it early.
- Clip off seed heads in pastures.
- Continue using vaccines.

Zeneca To Market Surpass Formulations

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Zeneca Ag Products (formerly ICI) has announced that it plans to offer two formulations of new Surpass corn herbicide for 1994, and additional formulations in following years.

Surpass EC and Surpass 100 will be the first two formulations to become available, according to Steve Miller, product manager at Zeneca. The company anticipates commercial registration of both formulations in advance of the 1994 use season.

Surpass EC

Surpass EC is primarily a grass herbicide, but it also gives effective control of several small-seeded broadleaf weed species, Miller said.

The product controls foxtails, fall panicum, crabgrass, barnyardgrass, woolly cupgrass, lambsquarters, redroot pigweed, common ragweed, black nightshade, and additional grasses and broadleaf weeds. It also suppresses wild proso millet, shattercane, and seedling johnsongrass.

Surpass EC contains 6.4 pounds per gallon of the active ingredient, acetochlor, plus 1.1 pounds per gallon of the corn safener dichlormid. It's applied at a rate of 1 to 3 pints per acre, according to Miller.

"Rates depend on soil texture," Miller said. "For a medium soil, such as a silt loam, a typical use rate would be 2 pints per acre."

The safener provides a wide margin of crop tolerance. Miller says Surpass has been applied at four times the labeled rate in university trials, with no signs of crop injury.

Atrazine Premix

Surpass 100 is a premix of Surpass and atrazine, again with the corn safener included. Each gallon contains 3 pounds acetochlor, 2 pounds atrazine, and 0.5 pound dichlormid.

Because acetochlor helps control broadleaf weeds, Surpass 100 provides broad-spectrum control with lower atrazine rates than other premixes. Use rates for Surpass 100 are 1.6 to 3.3 quarts per acre, which provides 0.8 to 1.65 pounds atrazine per acre.

"At typical use rates, Surpass 100 contains about 25 percent less atrazine per acre than Bicep," Miller said. "This may be helpful to farmers as atrazine rates become increasingly restricted."

Both formulations of Surpass are applied preemergence or shallow-incorporated, up to 30 days prior to planting. They may be sprayed with water or liquid fertilizer as a carrier, or impregnated on dry bulk fertilizer, and they may be tank mixed with other herbicides for corn.

Future Formulations

Zeneca is evaluating additional formulations of Surpass for the future, including liquid and dry encapsulated products, dry granules, and a premix of Surpass and Eradicane herbicides.

Sheep Association Sets Meeting

Greene, Carroll County extension agent in Maryland, who has written a sheep management guide that provides information aimed primarily at the small sheep flock operator. Greene is also a successful sheep producer, judge, shearing instructor, and is annually involved in the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival.

A brief business meeting will be conducted by President Ed Donough.

Anyone interested in sheep, curious about profit making, or yearning to become involved with the association should feel free to attend. For more information, contact Chester D. Hughes at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Office (717) 394-6851.

Cutting Alfalfa In The Fall?

Dr. Marvin Hall
Penn State University

The goal of most forage programs is to maximize economic yield of nutrients while ensuring stand persistence. Fall harvesting of alfalfa is a key management decision in the quest for optimum economic performance. Decisions on fall cutting should be made based on a sound understanding of how a plant grows and survives.

During the late summer and early fall, alfalfa plants are preparing for winter by developing cold resistance and storing energy reserves in their roots. Depending on the timing, fall harvest may interfere with this process. Harvesting alfalfa at a time that will allow only a few weeks of regrowth before the herbage is killed by frost will greatly reduce energy reserves in the roots. Harvesting will also remove stubble which catches snow and serves as a layer of insulation from extremely cold air temperatures. Both of these situations increase the risk of alfalfa winter kill.

Winter environmental conditions can aggravate the effects of fall harvesting. Temperatures of 5° F will injure alfalfa crowns and roots. Soil and snow serve as insulation between the alfalfa plant and cold air temperatures. Lack of snow increases the risk of winter kill. Wet soils will freeze and thaw more intensively, which will increase the amount of frost heaving. Don't fall-harvest fields that have a history of frost heaving or accumulating little snow cover.

- Taking at least one harvest during the summer at 1/10 bloom or greater.
- Fall harvesting young stands because young stands are less susceptible to winter injury.
- Maintaining high soil fertility levels.
- Fall harvest alfalfa varieties that have good disease resistance and winterhardiness.

Although fall harvesting increases the risk to stand loss compared with not fall harvesting, the need for forage or the value of the forage may be greater than the risk. Making the decision to cut in the late summer or fall requires weighing the risk of winter injury against the need for the forage. Use the scoring system in Table 1 to assess the risk of late summer or fall harvesting alfalfa.

Optimum levels of potassium in the soil enhance the storage of energy reserves in alfalfa roots. High reserves of energy in the roots as winter begins improve the ability of afalfa to overwinter and support good spring growth. It is important that adequate potassium be available during the late summer and early fall since the storage of energy reserves for winter survival occurs during this time. Applying potassium fertilizer after the plants go dormant for the winter does not benefit energy reserve storage.

Dorset Day Held

LEBANON, N.J. — The 8th Annual Dorset Field Day was held on Saturday, September 25 at the Perry Farm, Whitehouse Station, N.J.

A pair of horned Dorset ewes met the arrivals, one ewe with her one-day-old twins, the second with her 4-day-old youngster. Further up the farm path, barbecued lamb bits, lamb meatballs, lamb chile, cookies, and coffee provided refreshments for all.

A local "custom butcher" displayed the packaged cuts of meat obtained from a lamb, with descriptions of various other cuts of meat, and suggestions on how they could be prepared for the dinner table.

Further along, a young ram lamb held his position on a fitting table as he was "finished" for a show. Over in an adjoining field, several 4-H'ers were demonstrating how to show animals, and receiving fine points relative to set-up and positioning.

A display of poisonous and nuisance plants, common to fields and pastures, was available for review, complete with "land-out" data on pasture management and care.

Beef Show, Sale Set

WOODSTOWN, N.J. — On Saturday, October 23, the Salem County 4-H Beef Project members will hold their first annual Fall 4-H Beef Show & Sale at the Salem County Fairgrounds.

The beef show, starting at 10:30 a.m., will feature the beef animals raised by the County Corners 4-H Club members for their 1992-1993 4-H beef projects. Following the beef show, at 1 p.m., the animals will be auctioned to bidders by Grant Harris. This will be the final reward for the 4-H members involved.

The money received from the sale of their animals will enable them to purchase a calf for next year's project, and to put the profit, if any, into savings for future education. Preceding the beef sale will be an appreciation luncheon for any and all prospective buyers, interested persons, and 4-H supporters.

The 4-H beef project begins in September or October when each 4-H'er selects and purchases a 500-pound market calf to raise until its sale in mid-October of the following year. 4-H members ranging in age from 9-19 spend many hours with daily feeding, grooming, and care. The 4-H'er must also halter-break and teach the steer to lead and stand correctly for shows. In addition, the member is also responsible for keeping financial and production records, as well as the animal's health. The end result of 13 months of hard work is the highest quality market steer, weighing between 1,100 and 1,400 pounds.

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece. They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment your will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within FIVE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge. This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next five years.

This watch is available in both men's and women's styles. To receive your new work watch, read and complete the coupon below, and send it with your payment to:

Combo-Mulch Finisher Addresses Soil Compaction

RACINE, Wis. — The Case International 4200 Combo-Mulch Finisher from J I Case combines secondary tillage needs in a single pass, cutting time and reducing soil compaction, as well as fuel and labor expenses.

The 4200 comes in six sizes from 11 feet 10 inches to 34 feet 1 inch. It is available in six configurations — two rigid and four folding. All models transport at 15 feet 11 inches or less, one of the narrowest transport widths on combination secondary tillage machines in the industry, according to Kurt Schenck, Case product manager-implements.

Regardless of size, the 4200 features a minimum 40-inch "settling zone" between the disc gang and the first cultivator rank that allows the soil to settle before herbicide application and eliminates the need for shields at recommended operating speeds.

Mechanical depth control of the gangs is easily adjusted from 2 inches below to 5.5 inches above the sweep point. This gives operators the option of raising gangs to control the retention of surface residue or to use the 4200 as a field cultivator — an option, Schenck noted, that is often not offered by other manufacturers.

Pre-assembled, spring-cushioned gangs are set at 10-degree angles and work in conjunction with the 20-inch Earth Metal®, crimped-center disc blades for aggressive cutting action to create a smoother seedbed. The spring-cushion assembly on each gang prolongs the life of the entire gang by "springing" over obstacles in the field. Independent spring-cushioning gives customers the option of installing hydraulic depth control without affecting the machine's cushioning ability.

Shank spacing is set at 6.7 inches with 7.5-inch sweeps for optimum soil preparation and chemical incorporation.

The standard self-leveling hitch assures consistent depth control from the front to the rear of the 4200 and is adjusted with the hand crank provided. Walking beam axles that promote even stirring depth are also standard on the main frames and wings of all models except the 4221, which is equipped with single-axle wing wheels.

Six leveling attachments are available: three-bar adjustable coil tine harrow, five-bar adjustable spike harrow, single-bar peg harrow, double rolling basket, Bervac harrow, and Fuerst harrow. The unit can be ordered without a leveling attachment so it can be retrofitted regionally.

As the name implies, the Case International 4200 Combo-Mulch Finisher combines mulching and finishing into one operation to provide significant savings in time, fuel, and labor. It comes in six sizes and six configurations, all of which transport at 15 feet 11 inches or less.

Longwood Fellowships Announced

NEWARK, Del. — The University of Delaware's Longwood Graduate Program in Public Horticulture Administration has awarded five fellowships for 1993.

Ellen S. Bennett, Carl Haefner, Patrick Larkin, Elayna Singer, and Barbara Skye will receive tuition and a stipend while they pursue their master's degree.

The Longwood Graduate Program trains professional managers and leaders in public horticulture for careers in garden management, curatorship, education, and design. The program is a cooperative effort between the university's College of Agricultural Sciences and Longwood Gardens, an internationally renowned public garden in Kennett Square, Pa.

Bennett, a native of Alexandria, Va., graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (VPI) with degrees in biology and horticulture. While attending VPI, Bennett was the horticulture extension technician in the office of consumer horticulture. She is interested in the psychological benefits that plants hold for humans.

Haefner of Oyster Bay, N.Y., was an education intern and grounds maintenance intern at Planting Fields Arboretum. He holds a degree in horticulture from Cornell University, where he was named the 1992 Outstanding Senior Undergraduate in Horticulture by the American Society for Horticultural Science. His interests include visitor education, continuing education and community outreach.

Larkin has a degree in horticulture with a minor in psychology from VPI, where he served as arboretum manager while still a student. A native of Lynchburg, Va., Larkin was a horticulturist and landscape designer for a landscaping firm there before entering the Longwood Program.

Singer, who is from the Chicago area, received a degree in cultural anthropology with a minor in elementary education from the University of Wisconsin. She was an education intern at both the Scott Arboretum of Swarthmore College and the University of Pennsylvania's Morris Arboretum. Singer is interested in plants with ornamental winter characteristics and in the use of native and edible plants.

Skye, a Carthage, N.Y., native, has a degree in landscape architecture from the College of Environmental Science and Forestry at State University of New York in Syracuse. She was the environmental marketing consultant for Woodward-Clyde Consultants in Plymouth Meeting, Pa. Skye also has worked as an estate gardener/drafter for the National Trust property at Tintinhull House in England and as a landscape designer in Vermont. Her interests are plant exploration and ethnobotany.

Bull Test Program Begins

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A total of 75 bulls arrived at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center recently as part of the center's 21st annual bull testing program.

This group of bulls, born from January 1 to April 15, 1993, will be given a 21-day adjustment period, and then weighed onto official test. The animals will be weighed again every 28 days throughout the 112-day testing period. The bulls are all on pinpointer feeders to calculate individual feed efficiencies in addition to average daily gain and lifetime weight per day of age.

At the end of the test, all bulls must pass a comprehensive breeding soundness exam and a structural correctness evaluation. They also will be scanned ultrasonically to determine backfat thickness and loin eye area. Adjusted yearling weights will be calculated, and expected progeny differences (EPDs) made available for the bulls selected for sale in Pennsylvania's 21st Performance-tested Bull Sale. This sale is scheduled for Friday, March 25, 1994, at the Ag Arena at Penn State's University Park Campus.

Small Stream Management Benefits Environment

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Small streams are natural treasures, supplying some of our cleanest and healthiest water and feeding larger trout streams and rivers. Managing these small streams properly helps protect and improve the environment, said an aquatic ecologist in Penn State's College of Agriculture.

"People shouldn't be too quick to 'clean out' their small streams," said Dr. James R. Pratt, assistant professor of aquatic ecology in the college's School of Forest Resources. "They'll probably find some small fish in the pools that debris creates, and by giving the algae and microbes in the water a chance to break down fertilizers and other materials, they'll be helping the environment."

Bacteria, algae and protozoa live in these streams and break down sewage and other organic matter and take up nutrients from fertilizer runoff. Microbes help streams "clean" themselves, Pratt said. "When sewage or chemicals enter a stream, the microbes function like a small treatment plant, feeding on the pollution."

Bacteria, molds and protozoa also feed on leaves, wood scraps, and debris that fall into the stream. Microbes and the small leaf fragments left behind are eaten by larger organisms such as insects and fish.

An important way to care for a small stream is to leave intact piles of brush and logs that clog it. "These little dams help the stream and the environment in several ways," Pratt said. "Even insecticides and other chemicals can be broken down in small streams when the water pools up."

These pools slow the water flow during rainstorms and stop contaminants, such as manure and fertilizer, from washing downstream. When water is retained behind debris dams, silt and sediment settle out. In turn, the nutrient-rich silt helps feed the microbes that break down leaves, pollutants, and debris.

Pratt said this process also produces more and better food for fish in the stream. "Holding back the water even slightly gives nutrients more time to be absorbed by algae and other stream organisms that the fish feed on," he said.

Damming also holds back damaging storm water. "The energy of water rushing downhill is diminished by the little debris dams," Pratt said. "This keeps the stream from cutting deeper into the ground and keeps the stream channel stable.

"Removing debris from a stream, particularly with heavy equipment, can cause erosion and other problems. This erosion can undercut culverts and bridge abutments, slump stream banks, and destroy cross-stream fencing."

Pratt said that very large debris dams that cause flooding should be thinned, but not completely destroyed.

Cargill To Build Facility To Make Biodegradable Plastic

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Cargill announced that it will build a large-scale plant to produce lactic acid polymer, a biodegradable plastic made from renewable resources that can replace petrochemical-based plastics in a variety of food service, packaging, and other applications.

The $8-million plant, to be located at Savage, Minn., will make the polymer from natural lactic acid, which is produced by bacterial fermentation of sugars derived from such agricultural products as corn and other grains, potatoes, sugar beets, and milk.

Among the possible applications for the new product would be disposable fast-food, dairy and deli containers, food service ware, and disposable diapers, medical garments, personal hygiene products, and yard waste bags.

"The growing worldwide concern over solid waste disposal has prompted consumers, retailers, and manufacturers to consider a product's ultimate disposability or recyclability when purchasing or designing packaging and other plastic articles," said Mike Urbanic, president of Cargill's Corn Milling Division. "Our product offers the performance benefits of petrochemical-based plastics, but is compatible with various forms of waste disposal, including composting."

The plant, to be built at Port Cargill on the Minnesota River near Minneapolis, is expected to be operational by February 1994, and will have a capacity of 10 million pounds annually, Urbanic said. "We expect that demand for this product will lead to an even larger plant to produce corn-derived lactic acid polymers as early as 1996," he said.

Cargill's Corn Milling Division has processing plants in Cedar Rapids and Eddyville, Iowa; Dayton, Ohio; and Memphis, Tenn. Major products of those plants are corn sweeteners, cornstarches, corn oil, citric acid, sodium citrate, and corn gluten feed ingredients. The division opened an ethanol refinery at the Eddyville plant in 1992.

Case Stages Encore Performance Of Magnum Tractors

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — J I Case held the "encore performance" of its next generation of Case International Magnum tractors during Case IH dealer business meetings held in five cities across North America this week.

The new 7200 Series Magnum tractors include five models, the 7210, 7220, 7230, 7240 and 7250, which are rated at 130, 155, 170, 195 and 215 PTO horsepower (97, 116, 127, 145 and 160 kW), respectively.

"When Case initially introduced the Magnum tractors in 1987, they represented the first real industry breakthrough in tractor design in more than two decades," said Tom Stadtmueller, J I Case director, agricultural equipment product management. "More than anything, the Magnum tractors are a line developed from customer input. We asked customers — thousands of them — to describe their dream tractor. And then we built it."

Since then, according to Stadtmueller, the tractors have undergone a careful evolutionary process.

Ron Morishita, J I Case product manager-Magnum tractors, explained that the new line retains key features customers have liked about the 7100 Series Magnum tractors.

Key changes to the line since the introduction include making in-cab hydraulic flow controls standard, reducing steering and shift-lever effort and providing an extra-slow creeper-speed option. A four-speed reverses has also been added, as well as many other features customers requested during the past several years. "All told, we've made more than 200 significant improvements during the past six years," said Morishita. "And now, the 7200 Series incorporates even more features our customers have been asking for."

Morishita identified turning radius as a major improvement that enhances performance. The turning radius required with the new 7200 Series tractors is now as much as 11 percent tighter than on previous models. To achieve tighter turns, the lower front grill and side panels have been re-sculptured and steering angles modified.

Several other changes have been made inside the cab to make operation easier and more comfortable. One is the replacement of the hydraulic flow control lever with a control knob to allow infinite adjustment. The addition of the new multimode MFD system facilitates tighter, shorter turning when using the brakes for turns. When set in the "alternate on" mode, applying either brake disengages the front drive and allows the tractor to turn shorter than would be possible with the front drive engaged. When the turn is completed, the MFD re-engages.

Among other changes operators will notice in the cab is an improvement in the seat that reduces fatigue and provides even greater operator comfort. A new deluxe seat is also available.

The cab also features a new, advanced air-conditioning system that makes use of a more environmentally friendly refrigerant. Compressor capacity has been increased to make sure the system offers the comfort levels farmers have come to expect from a Magnum.

At 170 PTO horsepower, the 7230, like the other Magnum™ models, features a standard 18-speed full powershift transmission with four reverse speeds.

Maryland Joins Ag For NAFTA

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker has announced that the Maryland Department of Agriculture has joined a national organization of agricultural interests supporting the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Known as Ag for NAFTA, the coalition represents a broad spectrum of farm organizations and agribusiness firms working to secure approval of the trade agreement by the U.S. Congress.

"There is absolutely no question that NAFTA will benefit Maryland agriculture. The demand for our products in Canada and Mexico is tremendous. This pact will mean increased exports of Maryland agricultural products throughout this hemisphere. The result will mean expanded markets for Maryland agriculture and more jobs," Walker said.

"My fellow agriculture secretaries in the Mid-Atlantic region and around the country see NAFTA as a real boost to the U.S. economy. Increased trade can only help our agricultural industry which is still number one in the world. Nations everywhere are clamoring for U.S. food products to help feed their people. Now is not the time to stifle the expansion of these markets," said Walker.

More than 100 groups make up the Ag for NAFTA coalition including state agencies and farm organizations such as the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Corn Growers Association, and the National Cattlemen's Association.

Ostrich Breeders Plan Local Association

This plan was the culmination of a two-day conference at Royal Ostrich in Greensburg in September. More than 150 from 10 states attended.

Panelists included Sid Smith, owner, Blue Streak Ostrich, Carnegie, Okls.; Dr. Ed Gilsleider, veterinarian, Claremont, Okla.; Dr. Marilyn Coleman, president and live production specialist, MAC Associates, Columbus, Ohio; and Robert Lakey, lawyer and president of American Ostrich Association, Sayre, Okla.

Smith has been breeding for six years and has taken his operation from two birds to an inventory of almost 200 birds. He attributes the success to his wife Peggy's constant attention to the operation.

Gillsleider presented diagnostic and treatment procedures as well as guidelines on purchasing ostriches. Coleman provided statistics from her consultancy in the poultry industry. Lakey discussed the role of local and national associations.

The panel presentation was followed by a tour of the Royal Ostrich Farm. The next day, the local ostrich association was discussed and Doug Kayser was named chairman of the organization.

The Best of the Best

The Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality coating represents the best of the best in the Wheeling Corrugating line of premium galvanized roofing and siding. Every panel that carries the 2 ounce coating assures you are getting the toughest, the most durable, the most corrosion resistant galvanized sheet available in today's marketplace.

2oz. Seal of Quality Wheeling

Genuine Old-Time Quality
Every Wheeling 2 oz sheet is manufactured from heavy gauge steel, topped with an extra thick zinc coating, and formed into profiles that contribute strength and good looks Build with a Wheeling 2 oz sheet and you'll be working with the kind of durability and dependability that's been a standard in the industry for almost 100 years

The Proof is in the Process
The performance behind the Wheeling 2 oz Seal of Quality is possible because of Wheeling's patented Cook Norteman manufacturing process This technology allows a more consistent quality product, and a more uniform coating with unsurpassed zinc adhesion The process takes more handling and more time, but the end result is a super premium panel that has its own limited 20-year performance warranty

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

Pequea

Models 510S, 515E, 520, 520H, 525 & 530T Bunk Feeders

Here's a beetter way to feed your herd! With the Pequea portable bunk feeder, you'll save time – save money. Load it up with silage, haylage, round or square bales or any mixture of grain and forage. Tow it into the field, and feed up to 52 head of cattle at once.

With Pequea's efficient slant-bar system cows can't push each other away from feeding spaces, so you have less feed loss from spills. Convenient low tank height accomodates any size cow.

You can save wear and tear on your pasture and they eliminate heavily trampled spots. Just move it to a new location each day.

ADC Meets Farmers' Needs

More Than $129 Million in Extra Payments

"At Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, our mission is to maximize returns to members. In the past six years, we returned more than $129 million to members in equity payments, over-order premiums and quality bonuses. That's an average of $36,600 per member. And these extra dollars are continuing at the rate of $1.7 million a month.

"When non-members ask me why they should belong to Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, I am happy to report that we are financially healthy, strong in membership and growing in sales. ADC is the region's largest and most fiscally-sound cooperative, with a guaranteed market and outstanding benefits.

Robert B. McSparran
President

"More dairy farmers joined us last year than at any time in the past decade. If you are not an ADC shipper and are worried about your own milk market, then you should talk to the cooperative that is facing the future with confidence."

Student Vet Program Enters Third Year

LEE'S SUMMIT, Mo. — The Pfizer Animal Health Student Representative Program is entering its third year this fall with a program that will involve 31 veterinary students from the United States and Canada.

In addition to the schools in the U.S., four Canadian veterinary schools will participate. This move is in line with the company's new direction, which led to the formation of a new North American Animal Health Division that markets products in the U.S. and Canada.

The student representative program provides one third-year student from each veterinary school with the opportunity to plan and implement selected educational activities that complement the school curriculum while increasing student exposure to the principles of veterinary pharmacology and therapeutics. Representatives are selected on the basis of their academic achievements, leadership roles and interest in pharmacology and food animal medicine.

For more than 26 years, Pfizer Animal Health has supported veterinary education through its scholarship program.

Deere Introduces Corn Head

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has introduced its new, advanced 90 Series corn head, which the company said provides smoother feeding, faster harvesting speeds, less potential for ear loss, and easier maintenance than its 40 Series corn head.

The advanced design of the new 90 Series corn head features innovative polyethylene Perma-Glide™ points, deck covers, and fenders; narrow transport and storage capability; and optional 3-piece, stalk-cutting knife rolls. New stalk-roll choices, new trash knives, and a large-diameter cross auger contribute to the increased performance of the new corn head.

The new series retains some 40 Series designs, such as gearcase-driven row units and drive chains running in an oil bath. A new, wider seal on the inspection door of the drive-chain oil pan provides increased leak protection.

The smooth, slick surface of the Perma-Glide points, deck covers, and fenders improves crop feeding and material flow in virtually all conditions. Depending on the situation, this can permit faster combine ground speeds and greater harvesting capacity. The high-density, durable polyethylene material has reinforced ribbing for strength to resist dents and damage. The resilient surface of the molded components has a natural tendency to return to its original shape after minor deflections. This pliable-surface quality absorbs the energy from impacts and helps reduce ear bounce and the potential for ear loss.

The surface of the Perma-Glide components is not painted. The color is impregnated throughout the material for a permanent green appearance. The components won't fade, rust, or ever need painting.

The Perma-Glide points are quick and easy to adjust and level without tools, by repositioning the stirrup support located between each row unit. Removing and reinstalling two pins repositions the stirrup support in any one of four positions.

Easy access to the row unit is provided by removing two locking pins and placing the point's cast-iron shoe in the support stirrup. This secures the row point and deck cover in an upright position and provides access to the row unit without raising the head with the combine.

The points and deck covers can be locked in the upright position by installing a pin through the shoe ring and support stirrup of each row unit. This provides a transport width of less than eight feet when moving the corn head on a transport trailer. The upright position also minimizes storage space requirements for the 90 Series corn head.

The Perma-Glide deck covers weigh about one-third as much as metal shields, which makes removal and installation easier, if necessary.

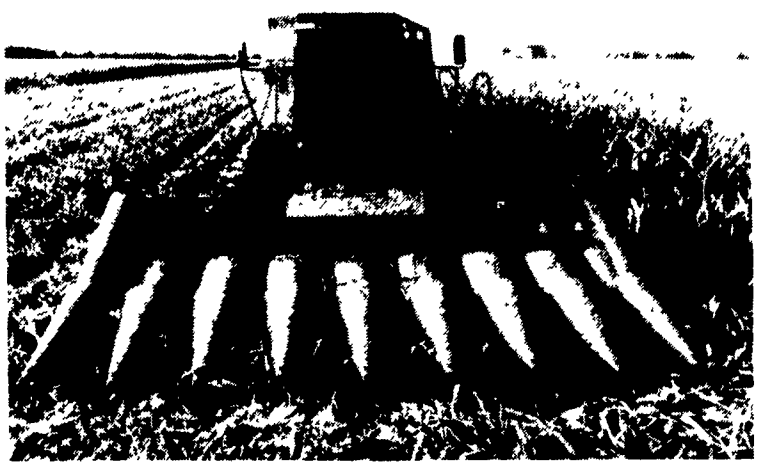
The new corn head offers a choice of straight-fluted stalk rolls or optional knife rolls. For faster stalk pull-through, the straight-fluted rolls feature 55 percent more crop engagement area between the rolls than the tapered rolls on the 40 Series. This efficient, aggressive, stalk-stripping action increases feeding capacity in down crops and reduces the potential for plugging in weedy conditions. It also reduces trash intake in high-moisture corn by as much as 50 percent, for increased separating capacity at the concave and straw walkers.

Straight-fluted rolls are recommended if requirements call for leaving stalks intact for maximum residue at planting time.

Optional, knife stalk rolls feature six full-length, beveled blades that contact the crop 148 times per second. The full-length blades permit maximum chopping and cutting action from front to back. The blade design produces a more aggressive feeding performance than the straight-fluted rolls and minimizes the potential for plugging in heavy weed or vine conditions. The knife roll's power requirement is the same as for the tapered stalk roll on the 40 Series.

The knife rolls use an innovative 3-piece design that simplifies service and reduces replacement costs. Each roll consists of a one-piece cast body with two attaching halves, which permits replacing worn blades without removing the entire stalk roll. Unlike most other knife rolls, the blades do not require adjustment.

The 90 Series corn head is available in eight models ranging in size from 4 to 12 rows and 30 to 38-inch row spacings.



John Deere 90 Series Corn Head features polyethylene row points, deck covers, and fenders that improve feeding an material flow, resist minor dents, and reduce the potential for ear loss. Straight-fluted stalk rolls provide an aggressive feeding action and maximum residue retention. Optional knife rolls are more aggressive and size residue in 10- to 16-inch lengths for meeting various tillage and planting requirements.

Ag Agents Group Honors Dean

BALTIMORE, Md. — David L. Call, dean of the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell University, has been selected by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents to receive the organization's 1993 Service to American and World Agriculture award.

Call will receive his award plaque at Thursday morning's general session of the 78th annual NACAA meeting, scheduled Aug. 22-26 at the Baltimore Convention Center.

Reared on a large, diversified vegetable and cash grain farm just outside Batavia, N.Y., Call was the youngest of six children. His father and all five siblings are Cornell graduates. Two of his brothers still operate the family farm, My-T Acres, which now has added fruit production to its diversified operation.

David Call has spent most of the last 40 years at Cornell, where he earned bachelor's, master's, and his doctorate degrees — the latter two in agricultural economics.

His Cornell service was interrupted by two years of service in the U.S. Army, a two-year stint in the Department of Agricultural Economics at Michigan State University, and a year as a visiting professor in the Department of Nutrition and Food Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Call was appointed H.E. Babcock Professor of Food Economics in the Graduate School of Nutrition at Cornell in 1962 and dean of Cornell's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences in 1978. Prior to the latter appointment, he served five years as director of the New York State Cooperative Extension Service.

He is credited with being an early leader among U.S. land-grant college administrators in advocating a broad view of the diverse interests that are central to the present and future welfare of this nation's agriculture.

According to a former colleague, "David Call has sought to bring farmers together with consumers who use their products and those who have a deep interest in the environment."

During his academic career at Cornell, Call taught courses in food economics. His research activities included analysis of government food and nutrition programs, factors causing changes in nutrition and food consumption, and consumer acceptance of food substitutes.

In recent years, Call served on several panels appointed by New York's Governor Mario M. Cuomo. These include the Governor's Council on Fiscal and Economic Priorities, 1983; Regional Economic Development Council for the Southern Tier Region, 1984; and Task Force on Agricultural Use Value Assessment, 1986.

ProGenetics Displays European Genetics At Field Day

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Despite the rainy circumstances, farmers from near and far took time out of their day recently to explore what ProGenetics, a division of White Oak Mills in Elizabethtown, had to offer at its ProGenetics Field Day.

More than 300 swine producers and industry representatives filled the Manheim Farm Show Building, where the event was held.

Dr. Mike Miller, vice president of sales and marketing for White Oak Mills, said, "We took the opportunity to show off our new European bloodlines. Everyone enjoyed seeing the pigs and participating in the numerous activities which existed throughout the day."

Producers from Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, Iowa, Ohio and North Carolina attended the ProGenetics Field Day.

Dr. Peggy Hawkins, staff veterinarian for White Oak Mills, demonstrated artificial insemination techniques, explained the process involved, as well as provided hands-on experience for attending producers.

"Because we sell only limited quantities of semen from our ProGenetics boar station," Hawkins said, "our goal was to make progressive farmers aware that they could buy their own ProGenetics boars and collect and extend semen on their own farm."

She said, "Producers seemed quite curious to view live semen under the microscope and were most intrigued when someone wanted to follow my example and breed a sow."

Other demonstrations included ultrasound selection, in which a real time machine scanned backfat and loin depth of a live hog at the 10th rib; market hog evaluation; feeding hogs for high-lean gain; and marketing hogs using the Fat-O-Meter.

Dr. Ken Bryant, director of tech services for Carl S. Akey, a field day sponsor, said, "I was very impressed with the representation of the swine industry. ProGenetics provided a broad-based view of the needs and trends of the industry, including general, nutritional, pharmaceutical and marketing information."

He said, "This event allowed our company to visit with key customers of White Oak Mills and other producers and to continue to educate them about pork production."

In addition, ProGenetics took the opportunity to show off their new European bloodlines, including Pietrain and Danish boars, Pietrain/Duroc crosses, Danish Landrace, Swedish Large Whites, and Pro Gilts, while ProGenetics representatives stood nearby to answer questions.

Dairy Production Medicine Program Holds First Graduation

UNIVERSITY PARK (Center Co.) — The first 23 veterinarians to complete the Dairy Production Medicine Certificate Program were recognized in a formal ceremony held recently on Penn State's University Park Campus.

"This event culminates three years of dedicated effort," said Dr. Dale Moore, program coordinator and research assistant in Penn State's veterinary science department. "These veterinarians receive certificates that enable them to sit on the American Board of Veterinary Practitioners' Dairy Specialty Board."

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine started the program in January 1991 to help veterinarians take a more active role in healthy herd management.

"Today's veterinarians are being asked to devise preventive health management strategies and to help herds meet their production potential," Moore said. "The Dairy Production Medicine Certificate Program serves a real need, since these topics are rarely covered in the standard veterinary curriculum."

The participants completed a series of nine three-day workshops to help them shift their emphasis from the health of individual animals to the health of an entire dairy herd. The final workshop focused on problem solving and farm finances, integrating all the skills and techniques covered in previous workshops.

The workshops were held both on Penn State's University Park Campus and at Penn's New Bolton Center. Each workshop featured lectures, laboratory work, visits to study herds, and practical assignments.

Topics covered in the workshops included mastitis control and milk quality, infectious diseases and replacement heifers, computer skills, herd monitoring, reproductive management, epidemiology, nutrition, and the relationship between the environment and animal health.

To evaluate the program's effectiveness, changes in productivity, reproductive efficiency, and milk quality are being monitored in herds served by the participating veterinarians. "We want to assess the program's impact by comparing the performance of those herds with that of control herds whose veterinarians were not enrolled in the course," Moore said.

CLAAS® Rollant round balers give you what you want

—one quality round bale after another.

Discover Quality...Discover Value...

The Rollant 66 makes fast work of 4'x5' bales. Its unique two-stage pick-up and close tines produce a clean, efficient harvest in less time. Rollatex netting wraps a bale in 10 seconds or less, and double-twine wraps it up in just 20.

The Rollant 46 introduced CLAAS's innovative fixed bale chamber to the marketplace. This versatile baler handles all farm operations from dry hay to silage. Nobody produces a better 4'x4' bale.

The Rollant 42 was designed for family livestock operations. This economical investment produces weather-tight 4'x4' bales for the highest nutrient content possible.

Each Rollant offers the innovative chamber, low-profile pick-up, and world class dependability. And they all share CLAAS's international reputation for low maintenance, durability and long-life.

Call now to see how you can improve the round figures on your bottom line.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a function of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheel and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers.

Most Mix-All owners will never buy another.

2 SIZES IN STOCK: Model 125 Model 170

In fact, you'd probably have a hard time convincing Gehl Mix-All® owners to even look at anything else. And why should they?

The Mix-All's big 12-inch wide hammermill features 66 reversible thin hammers that cut, rather than pound the feed to deliver a more consistent grind and ensure uniform mixing for a better feed conversion rate.

Gehl's self-contained hydraulic system is designed-in, not added on. It provides the precision of infinitely variable in-feed attachment control to match tractor power for greater grinding capacity. Plus you get fast, smooth, trouble-free unloading with greater reliability.

Conservation Tillage Equipment Built SUNFLOWER Tough!

Sunflower's Coulter Ripper is for today's conservation minded farmer demanding deep tillage with minimal residue disturbance. These durable machines feature adjustable front mounted coulters on 7½" centers. The coulter blades have an added advantage of slicing hard ground to keep clod size to a minimum. The V-bar ripper design gives added trash clearance and pulls smoother than straight-bar rippers. These coulter rippers are built Sunflower tough and no ballast is added to the frame increasing the structural strength. Check out Sunflower's latest edition to its growing family of quality tillage equipment at a farm show or dealer near you.

Adjustable Coulter Gangs: The 4010/4110 both feature adjustable coulter gangs that can be raised completely in clean ground. Ratchet Jack Adjustment is standard equipment. Optional Hydraulic Gang Adjustment makes on the go changes or raising the coulters completely out of the way an easy task from the tractor seat.

REMEMBER THESE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED CASE AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES:

LAW #1- (14) Years Old is not equal to (≠) WORN OUT...
Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by HOOBER'S expert combine mechanics to like-new condition, so they provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

LAW #2- (3,500) HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE...
(3,500) Hours on a conventional combine usually means they'll be too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow combines with (3,500) hours, reconditioned by HOOBER'S, have proven to run for years when purchased by farmers in PA, MD, DE and NJ

LAW #3- A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWNTIME DURING HARVEST...
When Hoober's expert combine mechanics service and repair AXIAL-FLOW combines in the off-season, they run dependably through the season.

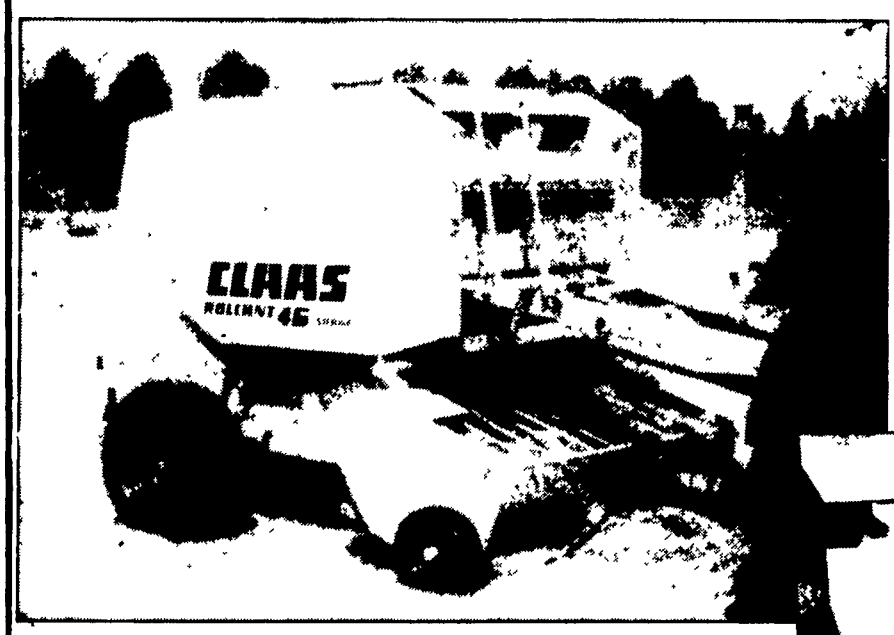
MASSEY-FERGUSON

NEW

MF 5650 COMBINE
1 Leftover Model At A One And Only Price!



The New ROTOCUT SILAGE BALER

Cuts Your Crop As It Is Forced Through A Series Of Knives.

The Benefits:
- Even higher bale density
- Easier distribution of bale contents

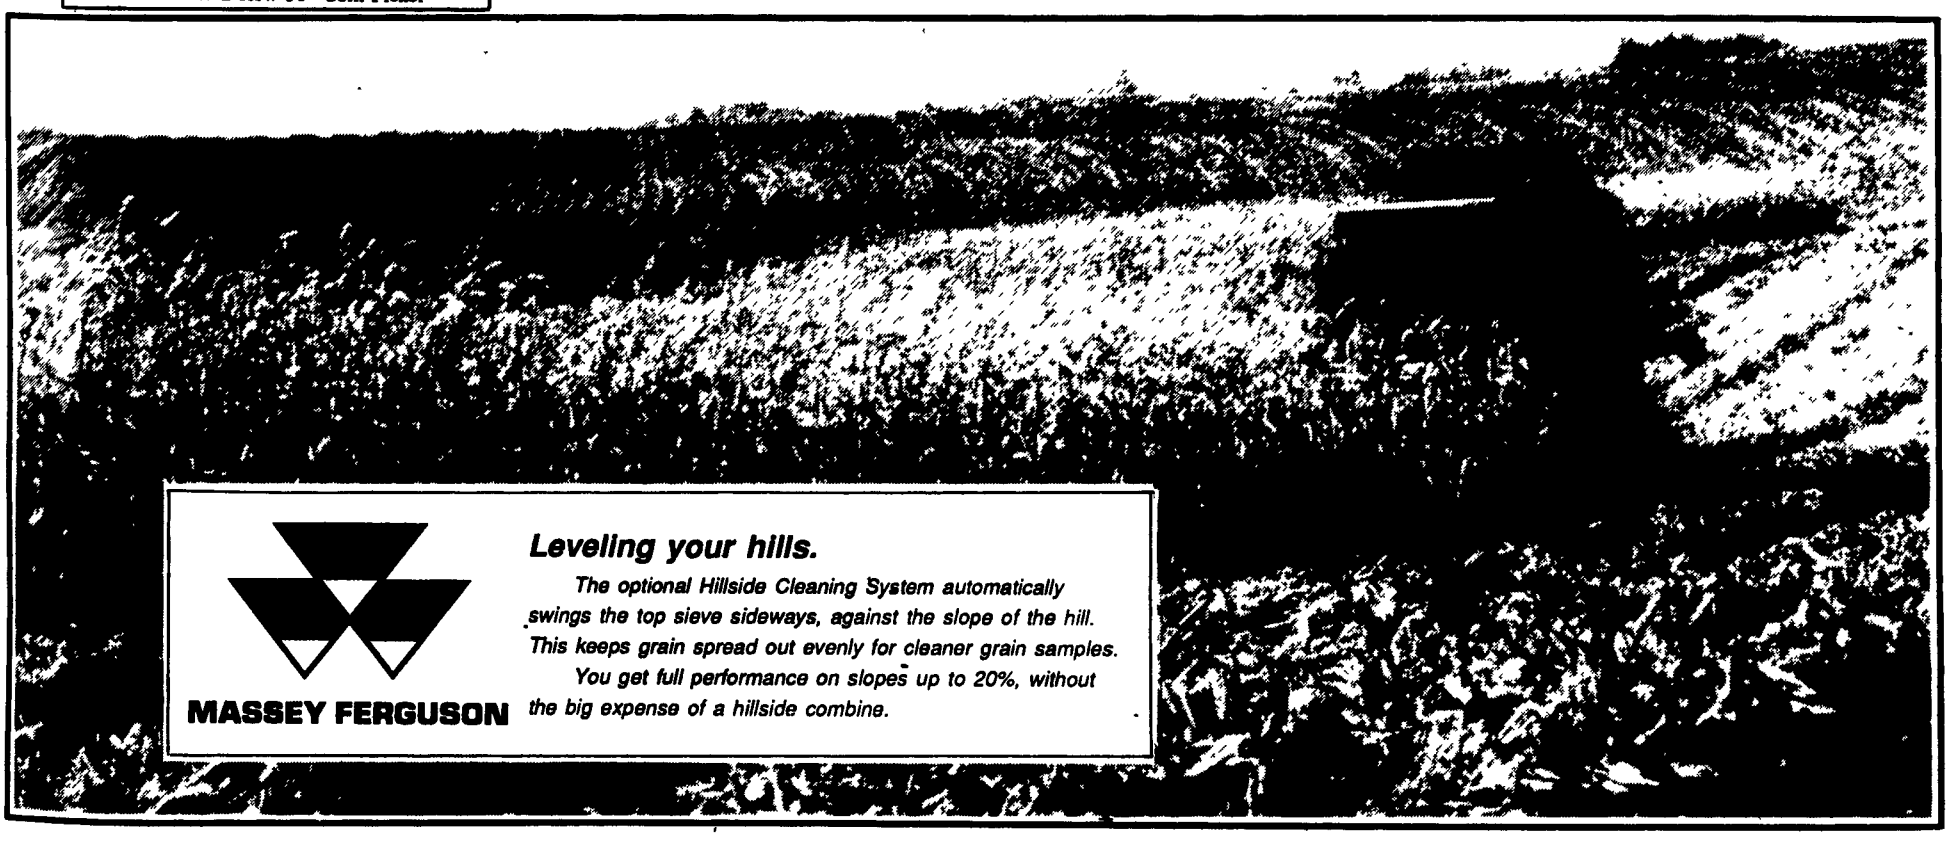
Hard to feed crops are aggressively fed right into this baler. Now you can cut and bale rye, barley and oats at boot stage. Bales fall apart - you can throw them down a hay hole and feed them with a fork.



MASSEY FERGUSON

Leveling your hills.

The optional Hillside Cleaning System automatically swings the top sieve sideways, against the slope of the hill. This keeps grain spread out evenly for cleaner grain samples. You get full performance on slopes up to 20%, without the big expense of a hillside combine.

BARN CLEANERS

All-forged Hook-Link® chain... available on Super 300 and Super 500 barn cleaners
Extra thick steel at all wear points
IMPORTANT: Look for the "parting line" on any barn cleaner chain you buy. It shows where excess metal has been trimmed off. It is your assurance that the link was totally forged, not just punched out of a flat steel bar with grain flow in one direction only.
You want a totally-forged link because forging changes the grain on the steel, causing it to curve in unbroken flow lines around the contours of the link, giving the link greater strength to serve you longer.

A. Enhancement of cash flow. Improved forage quality results in consistent, and increased milk production.

B. "Safe Silo" Our silos meet or exceed industry standards, reducing/protecting lender liability.

C. Initial Cost. Used or cheap pre-fab silos may have a lower initial cost, but based upon useful life, the new poured concrete silo will have a lower annual cost: due to longer life and lower maintenance costs.

D. Residual Value. Our new, poured concrete silos are built for "generations of use", and enhance the future value of the farm.

E. Storage Losses Reduced. Poured concrete silos consistently out-perform all other methods of storing and preserving the total digestible nutrients in forage crops.

F. Protecting Forage Quality. Oxygen and heat cause the most damage to stored silage and haylage. Our poured concrete silos are the very best system to PROTECT YOUR FORAGE QUALITY... "NOBODY PROTECTS FORAGE QUALITY LIKE WE DO...NOBODY"

JERRY HERSHBERGER FARM - New Enterprise, PA

PURINA MILLS DAIRY PROGRAMS ▷ ADD NEARLY 2,100 LBS. of MILK

Jerry Hershberger owns and operates a 130 cow dairy located in the heart of the Morrison's Cove at New Enterprise, Pennsylvania. In October of 1989, Jerry began working with Purina Mills and his local Purina dealer, Bedford Farm Bureau to improve the performance of his herd.

Mr. Hershberger feeds a total mixed ration balanced for 65 pounds of milk production. The current ration includes corn silage (60%), haylage (40%), 3.5 pounds hay, and 12 pounds high-moisture ear corn. The balance of the ration is a grain mix containing Purina Maxi-Tech 32 FF, soybean meal, shelled corn, and additional minerals and buffers. The grain mix is formulated by local Purina Dairy Specialist, Rob Hinton, and is provided by Bedford Farm Bureau. Cows producing 70 pounds of milk and above receive Purina's high-energy Ultimate EXT 24 from a computer feeder.

Jerry Hershberger Shares A Few Comments About Feeding Purina's ULTIMATE EXT During The Past 9 Months

- "I feel my cows are in better body condition than before. My heifers used to milk better than my mature cows because I couldn't keep weight on them... this isn't the case with Ultimate EXT."
- "Palatability is extremely good on EXT in my computer feeder."
- "My herd health and breeding have been good considering the lack of energy in poor quality forages and grains this past year."
- "Peaks and persistency are excellent. Our current tank average is 76.2 pounds per cow."
